Lenten Meditations

GOD AND THE NATION
(The London Times)

The drama of the Old Testament turns on the relation to God, not of the individual soul but of the nation, and a nation so situated as to be involved inextricably in the rivalries of great Powers.

With Moses, the people of Israel came into being as at once a political and a religious community, a nation with its own right to existence and yet at the same time conscious of a mission for which that existence had been given it.

In the encounter between king and prophet, whether it be Saul and Samuel, Ahab and Elijah, or Ahaz and Isaiah, the conscience of the nation embodied in the one joins issue with its policies as represented by the other.

Though the message of Jesus is often supposed to have been directed to his hearers purely as individuals, a closer study of the Gospels suggests that he addressed them also as members of the nation. The summons to repentance at the outset of the ministry was a call to Israel to dedicate itself afresh to the purpose for which it had been called into being.

The cleansing of the Temple was provoked not only by the commercial exploitation connected with the market held in its inner court, but at least equally by the fact that the court was the place of prayer for gentle seekers, and that Israel's duty was to welcome such and not to exclude them.

But the clearest evidence that he was concerned for the nation, its mission, and its fate, as in the tears which he shed over Jerusalem, as he saw in anticipation the doom in store for it and grieved that it had not repented and received him while there was still time.

Even a modern nation is not without understanding that it is somehow under God. The European peoples are no mere products of geographical accident or historical conquest; in most cases their civilization begins with the acceptance of the Christian faith, and with it the culture of the ancient world.

Their moral standards are derived in no small measure from the Bible, and much of their literature is unintelligible without it, while their common speech is rich in allusions to it. Moreover, it is impossible to suppose that a people which has maintained a continuity of life and tradition through the centuries has not a moral role as well as a political one.

No nation can be wholly secularized, for it will take its secularism, its atheism even, with religious fervour and commend it as the way of salvation. But no nation should use its spiritual mission as a mere sanction for its own interests and ambitions.

The tension between king and prophet in the ancient world reappears as that between expediency and conscience in the modern world. A nation's greatest hour is when it is prepared to sacrifice political advantage at the bidding of a moral ideal.

Cubs, Brownies and Girl Guides all gave very interesting reports which showed that great progress has been made in these organizations. A banquet for the Scouts will be held in March. Mrs. Cook gave an excellent report on the work being done by the variety concert committee.

Farewell Party For Mr. & Mrs. John Falle

On the evening of February 2nd a farewell party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Robertson in honour of Mr. and Mrs. John Falle. A very fitting address was read by Mr. Gerald Proctor and a silver tea service was presented by Mrs. H. L. Worthington from their friends.

Although taken completely by surprise Mr. Falle thanked his friends on behalf of Mrs. Falle and himself for their good wishes and beautiful gift.

The evening was pleasantly spent in playing canasta, after which an enjoyable lunch was served by Mrs. Lloyd Robertson and Mrs. Wilfred Coffin, who were joint hostesses. The party was closed by singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows", after which each one went on their way wishing Mr. and Mrs. Falle good luck in their new home.

We are gathered here tonight for a very auspicious but rather sad occasion, that of wishing our very good friend John and his charming wife "bon voyage", and the best of good wishes as they leave our fair city to take up residence in Saint John.

Throughout the years that John and Mrs. Falle have lived here, they were always more than willing to assist in the work for the betterment of our city, and among their many friends this genial couple will be missed, even if John isn't so hot playing canasta and cribbage. We all know that Jack, through the medium of Agnew-Surpass, always did his best to ease the footsore and weary traveller as he journeys through this vale of tears.

I am sure we all congratulate him on his appointment as manager of a larger branch of the company which he represents, and what will be Saint John's gain will be our loss. We would like to take this opportunity to ask you and Mrs. Falle to accept this small remembrance as a token of our friendship and esteem. Again wishing you, Mrs. Falle and family the best of everything in your new home, we are

Your old friends,
Doris and Lloyd Robertson, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Walker, Hilda and Nelson Robinson, Nettie Winchester, Mrs. Leahy, and Mrs. Gerald Proctor, Ada and Wilfred Coffin, Charlie Rowe, Douglas Coffin, Frances Coffin, Carl Coffin, Helen and Art Love, Danny MacRae.

The relatives and friends in Flat River and vicinity were shocked to hear of the sudden passing of Angus Wellington MacRae in the P. E. I. Hospital on January 11th, 1951, in his 37th year. He was the son of the late Angus MacRae and Margaret Compton MacRae of Flat River.

He leaves to mourn his widowed mother in Flat River, also three brothers William L. at Melville; L. Sinclair at home and Lester M. at Pinette.

Owing to the nature of his illness a private funeral was held at Belfast Church, January 12th, at 1:30 P. M. Attended by immediate relatives and neighbours. Service was conducted by Dr. R. S. Quigley, Church Pastor.

Angus was a member of the Presbyterian Church of the Canadian Legion and of the L. O. L. MacEwen Lodge. He was laid to rest in Belfast Cemetery.

His pallbearers were J. Stewart Ross, Callum MacPherson, James Beaton, John Alex Ross, Alex A. Beaton and Donald MacKenzie.

In memory of my mother, Mrs. John MacKenzie, who passed away February 19th, 1948.

It is not the tears at the moment that tell, But the secret tears of the after years, And the sorrow that's silent borne. To think we could not say goodbye, Will always bring regret. But the hearts that have always loved you, Are the one's that will never forget. Always Remembered by Daughter, Mrs. Foch McKenna, Borden.
