External Audit
Quoting from the external audit tabled last year in the House, Dr. MacMillan said it was evident from whether the contract has been entered into or not. It was a great piece of folly to tear out a whole block to put a Federal building on. What is going to happen to those families?

Dr. MacMillan: "I would put it over here by the Court House."
Premier Jones: "On the Square?"
Dr. MacMillan: "Yes; where would you put it?"
Premier Jones: "What would you do with the Court House?"
Dr. MacMillan: "They followed your example—they are great people to buy. When the building is erected you are going to move into the old Y.M.C.A. building where you say you will have lots of room. I think it's too much room you have now."

The best bargain the Government was realizing on, Dr. MacMillan added, was the $3,600 rent they were getting for the old Sims building which the Conservatives had purchased for $10,000. "If the other financial transactions of this Government were on a par with that arrangement we would be in a happy state," he added.

But seriously, what is going to happen to those families on the Government building site? You can't buy or build anything now for anyone. It is pretty tough treatment for those people and it exemplifies the negligence of the Federal Government in not having a proper housing programme in this country.

Subsidy Awards
Dr. MacMillan again referred to the three subsidy awards received by this Province in the years 1912, 1926 and 1934. The first one had been written into the B.N.A. Act when it was assented to, but the other grants, totalling $275,000 in annual subsidy, had not been included until years afterwards.

These subsidies, Dr. MacMillan said, were given not as final settlements but as interim payments pending a settlement which has not been made. "The door at Ottawa has not been closed," he insisted. "All that is needed is somebody to knock on it."

Fiscal Need
In the obtaining of previous subsidies, the most important argument was that of fiscal need. This was also the basis of Premier Campbell's arguments before the Rowell-Sirois Commission, as well as of Premier Jones' own brief before the Dominion Government.

Yet in the Legislature two years ago the Premier had repudiated fiscal need as an argument, and said it had been replaced by some wonderful new yardstick of the then Provincial Treasurer (Mr. William Hughes).

"I think you will find that the question of fiscal need is still the important one," Dr. MacMillan said. "We surrendered our customs and excise duties — our principal sources of revenue — when we joined the Dominion and we were the first Province to have to resort to direct taxation under Confederation in other words we were the first victims of Ottawa's failure to adhere to the principle of fiscal need."

Citing at some length from the minority report of the White Commission, made by the late Hon. J. A. Matheson, Dr. MacMillan maintained that this Province had never been adequately treated under Confederation. Newfoundland had made the same discovery with respect to her recently negotiated terms of the discrimination against Prince Edward Island has gone on for many years.

Huge Debt Figures
Noting that the total net debt is now $15,308,000 with the prospect of another million and a quarter being added next year, Dr. MacMillan said this was a cause for very serious concern.

He took strong exception to statements appearing in the main-land press, reporting this Province as having a "surplus" year after year. "These statements are misleading the people of Canada as to our true position," he said. They referred only to ordinary account which "did not mean a thing." The real position as indicated by the mounting overall debt was minimized or ignored.
