DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

House of Commons.

Laurier's Objection to Mr. Abbott Met by Sir John Thompson.

Sir John Offered the Leadership.

Grounds of His Refusal.

OTTAWA, June 23.

In the House of Commons yesterday, on the order of the day being called, Mr. Laurier moved an adjournment in order to discuss the policy of the Government. He complained that by the election of Mr. Abbott as Premier the Canadian Pacific Railway had been given a preponderancy of influence in the councils of the nation.

Sir John Thompson replied that Mr. Abbott's connection with the ministry was nothing new. For about four years he had been Leader of the Government in the Senate, to the complete satisfaction of that body, who had nothing but compliments for him the other day when he became Premier.

Sir John Thompson ridiculed Mr. Laurier for quoting the Montreal Herald's interview with Hon Mr. Chapleau, after Chapleau had publicly repudiated it. Sir John Thompson said moreover that the Governor-General had called upon him to form an administration; but he had declined because he considered that the five or six years he had spent in Federal politics had not sufficiently qualified him and he declined in favor of an older and more experienced man who had been forty years in public life. Any statement of the press that he had been passed over because of his religion, or that he had attempted and failed to secure the support of the Conservative party, was untrue. Neither was any compact made or required that any of the ministry should retire at the end of the session to allow of a re-arrangement.

Cartwright complimented Thompson, but denounced the retention of Langevin in the Cabinet, and deplored the influence of the maritime provinces in the Cabinet.

Davies pointed to the Catholic Liberal with pride, and taunted the Conservatives with bigotry and illiberalism in kicking against Thompson.

Curran pointed to Davies as the only man in Prince Edward Island who had attempted to lead an exclusively Protestant government. He instanced the liberalism of the Davies government and of the present Manitoba government when the conscience of Catholics were concerned.

On division, Laurier's motion was defeated by one hundred and three to eighty-three. Twenty-two members were paired. Three Conservatives were absent, and two Conservative seats, Kingston and Richilieu, unrepresented. Tarte, Joncas, and other loose French fish, voted with the opposition.

FREAK OF NATURE.—At Truro there is a freak of nature to be seen in a garden, in the shape of a full blown white rose growing on an apple tree. The rose and a promising bud of the same species have preempted the places of two apple buds. The stems on which the roses grow are about twice as long as those of the apple buds growing on the same limb, but are otherwise like them.
