ADVERTISING RATES.

For small advertisements which are ordered for only one or two weeks the charge is 5c cents per inch for the first insertion, and 2 cents for each continuation. Rate cards are furnished on application at the office. Special contract prices at a reduced rate are quoted for advertisements four inches in size or larger, which are to run for three months or longer.

No special notices inserted unless paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line, and under no circumstances will such paid notices appear in the local column.

Special discounts made on all advertisements connected with Church Fairs, Bazaars, Picnics, etc. No notices will be inserted with the same unless the regular rate of 10 cents per line is paid.

That THE EXAMINER is considered by our Merchants and Manufacturers to be the leading newspaper in P. E. Island, and consequently the most valuable advertising medium through which to make their announcements public, is abundantly proved by the fact that in order to accommodate our advertisers we have been compelled to enlarge the paper to its present size

OLD AGE OF INDIANS.

Defying All Rules of Health They Keep Well and Strong.

The Remarkable Longevity of the Indian Race Explained.—For Every Human Ill They Have a Cure—They Know Where to Find the Roots, Herbs and Barks that will keep them in Good Health—The Secret Now Given to the World.

Laughing Dog. Age 106 Yrs.

Indians are long lived. There are many Kickapoos now living who have trod parts of this vast continent long before white men ever set his foot on the soil of their vast domain. Their lives have been spent with nature.

Born to good health, as the saying goes, they keep it.

Think how they live, eat, sleep, travel about, exposed to climatic changes, poisonous night airs, damp sleeping places, food half cooked, and eaten with utter disregard of all common rules of health.

Yet, look at them! Pictures of health.

Chronic Rheumatism? Never. Malaria and Chills? Very rarely. Indigestion? Occasional symptoms perhaps, but Chronic Dyspepsia, utterly unheard of. While any of the numerous afflictions of the liver, kidneys or bladder, so frequently found among the whites, is rarely heard of among the Indians.

Why is it?

For centuries these children of nature have studied her ways. For centuries they have known where to look in the forest and field for a certain cure for the ills which arise from the disobedience of nature's laws. At the first sign, the first symptoms of sickness, they resort to their "Segwa"—the most potent, remedial combination of roots and herbs known to the Indian or any other race.

A combination so valuable that the learned professor of Physiological Chemistry at Yale college commended it, and could offer no suggestions.

Science surpassed by Indian craft! Nature underfiled by mineral poisons. Indians are subject to ills of the flesh, but they have a remedy for all.

Kickapoo Indian Cough Cure breaks up their colds and stops their coughs. Kickapoo Indian Worm Killer keeps their children free from these troubles; and Kickapoo Indian Oil arrests croup, allays pain, heals bruises, and quickly kills all pains; Kickapoo Indian Salve heals, wounds, cuts, abrasions of the skin, humors, eczema, etc.

These remedies are now sold by every druggist in the land, and their best proof of genuine worth is in the fact that on their merit solely they have achieved this sale within a few short years. Ask for them at the Trading Post on the Frontier, and you'll find them there. Go into the fashionable drug stores of New York City, and these remedies of the Indians are to be bought. Everywhere, high and low, they have made friends by their intrinsic value. Sold by Druggists and Dealers.

Afraid of the Moon. Age 117 Yrs.

LIVER CURE

Why you take Cold and Cough.

Generally caused by exposure to cold, wet feet, sitting in a draught, coming from hot and crowded places, in thin dress, or wearing damp clothes, stockings, or any other cause tending to check suddenly the perspiration. The result produces inflammation of the lining membrane of the lungs or throat, and this causes phlegm or matter, which nature tries to throw off by expectoration. In many cases she is unable to do so without assistance, and this is

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

SOURCE OF THE DRINK EVIL.

SIR,—With the advent of autumn the temperance movement for a time dormant now begins to move apace, as indicated by the lectures and meetings throughout the country.

Looking at the temperance people from any standpoint one chooses, he cannot but admire their indefatigable energy and indomitable perseverance. Reverses do not appear to weaken their courage nor to lessen their faith in the justness of their cause, nor to shake their steadfast belief in the complete assurance of a final victory over one of the great enemies of the human race.

While all right thinking people must look with the fullest approval on their efforts in the direction of temperance reform, no one can but wish that their knowledge was equal to their zeal, for that there is something wrong somewhere is patent even to the most casual observer. If one is allowed to judge from the external manifestations of what is going on both at home and abroad, the traffic, sale and indulgence in intoxicating liquors have abated little, if any, during the past ten years. I do not deny that in country places the Scott Act when enforced, has restricted in some, measure the sale of liquor, but the alarming increase in the crime of perjury consequent thereto, must be taken into account.

It is said there are none so blind as those who will not see, and surely this was never more clearly exemplified than in the present instance.

If I should ask the leaders in the temperance movement what was the most potent factor of intemperance, I should receive all kinds of answers which it is needless to repeat here; but not one of them, I feel persuaded, would touch anywhere near the root of the matter.

How does it come that men with cool, calculating brains such as our leading temperance advocates are supposed to have, should utterly fail to perceive the prime cause of the liquor traffic? How does it come that men who are looked up to by the masses as infallible guides in all matters pertaining to the temporal welfare, either ignore or forget in their public utterances the all important fact that it is capital that sets in motion the whole machinery of the liquor traffic from its creation in the distilleries on down through all the tortuous channels of trade, till it reaches the low rumseller on the street corner and road side, where it is poured down the throats of the grand army of unfortunates. Who carries on the distillation of liquors? Is it not the rich men in the cities? Who supplies all the distributing centres with liquors, to be resold to the lowest order of barkeepers, who retail it by the glass to the people? Evidently the men of large capital. They alone are equal to the task. The whole business is so plain that one would think the wayfaring man, though a fool, could not err therein; and still I have yet to hear the temperance speaker who will attack these rich men, who are clothed in purple and fine linen and fare sumptuously every day. It requires little moral courage and involves no sacrifice of any material interest to indulge in lengthy strains of declamation against the poor unfortunate drunkard who tumbles in the gutter, but where is the temperance reformer who dares to scathingly rebuke the rich man whose hundreds of thousands invested in distilleries for the production of alcoholic drinks makes the condition of the drunkard possible? When I hear the temperance reformer expatiate upon the awful crime of drunkenness and the terrible blood guiltiness of the hardened rumseller, it strikes me as somewhat strange that the men who have, by their money, primarily produced this demon alcohol and sent him loose throughout the land, never come in for a share of righteous indignation. Any number of good and pious temperance people can be heard speaking against Lazarus at the gate, but not one word ever escapes their lips to disturb Dives in his palace. This ought not to be. They cannot serve God and mammon.

If the temperance people ever drive intemperance from our land it will be by attacking its chief citadel—by aiming their blows at the Plutocracy—the gods of wealth who operate the distilleries instead of beating the air by telling us what a bad thing rum is and how bad and mean rum sellers and rum drinkers are.

The best thinking portion of the community are becoming tired of hearing and reading aimless addresses and far-fetched dissertations on intemperance. They are now expecting some practical results along the lines of temperance. By your fruits they will know you. ARGUS.

The Drink Habit.

An English magistrate has sent a woman who is a confirmed inebriate to jail for six months. The woman had been neglecting her family, and a society for preventing cruelty to children was prosecuting her for this, so the magistrate thought a period of seclusion with wholesome food might work a good effect. A jail is not the best place to try an experiment of the kind, but it is the only recourse the magistrate had. Even if a special institution were provided for cases of this kind, it remains to be seen whether the result of a years enforced sobriety can be anything more than temporary regeneration when all the temptations to relapse are left untouched on the victim's returning home. The extreme difficulty of reforming, physically and morally, a diseased constitution is recognized by all qualified authorities, and the drink habit like other depraved tendencies varies so much in individual cases that satisfactory treatment is hard to reach. Among the poor of a large city drunkenness, just the same as other vices, is encouraged by mode of living and the hundred privations which induce ill-health, misery and discontent. One partial remedy that ought to be provided is a heavy punishment for the sale of liquor to inebriated persons or those afflicted with the habit. It may be a costly law to enforce, but inspection is a failure if it cannot effect this needed reform.—Empire.

"I Don't Want Any Dinner"

Well, if you should miss a meal, all the better. Don't let anybody induce you to eat if you don't feel inclined. Tell them to mind their own stomach and you will mind yours. The appetite will return after the digestion is made all right, and one of the safest and surest helps in that direction is a course of Membray's Kidney and Liver Cure, now on sale by all druggists in Canada. ...

THE PEOPLE KNOW THEM,

Because They Know How to Advertise.

Novel and Successful Methods of Reaching the Public Eye.

"They are the best advertisers in Canada."

The speaker was one of a group of business men who were discussing the question of advertising.

They had been discussing a particular case, that of the Hawker Medicine Co. of St. John, whose originality and persistence in the line of advertising has made the public stare in astonishment.

"They started with a street parade and a big dinner," said one of the group, "and I hear that their next project will be to march an elephant from St. John to Halifax!"

The speaker then enumerated the various advertising devices adopted by the Hawker Medicine Co. They blanketed the cart horses of the city with coverings that bore advertisements in big white letters. They placed on the face of Fort Howe a gigantic sign that no passer-by on Main Street can fail to see. They placed another one on the grand stand at Moosepath park, where all passengers by the I. C. R. may easily read of Hawker's pills and tonic. They got out thousands of signs that stare at the public everywhere. They put an exceedingly taking series of signs in the city market over one of the exits, where it may be read by every countryman and every citizen who goes there. They turned fences into instruments of speech. They chartered a steamer and hired a band and ran a monster excursion to Digby and Annapolis, scattering advertising fans among the passengers, and handbills and pill samples among the thousands congregated at Annapolis to see the sports for which the Hawker company gave gold medals. They had walking advertisements there, and from the steamer floated an advertising flag that could could be read afar off. The night before the excursion they had a polymorphian parade in St. John, led by the band. They made arrangments with boat owners and painted their sails with "Hawker's Pills," "Hawker's Tonic," "Hawker's Catarrh Cure," etc, in letters that can be read miles away. They painted the sails of a schooner running to Boston, and of one going to Newfoundland; and ships sailing to British and other distant ports are also to tell the mariners upon the ocean, as they throw their canvas to the breeze, that the Hawker remedies are the best on earth. The time may not be far distant when a St. John vessel will be known by the message she bears on her sails. Pawnee Bill, when here, used Hawker's pills as a target for sharpshooting. The company photographed a handsome group of boys in special costume, had the photos framed and displayed in stores. They got artistic pictures framed and other ornaments to display in drug stores. They had an immense lot of serviceable store aprons made and are scattering them far and wide, their advertisements being on both sides of each apron. They sent two men to Gagetown last week, and when the Orangemen from St. John and three other counties met there they saw the Hawker remedies advertised on every hand, they saw a huge balloon aloft bearing an immense advertisement, and, if either the dinner or the speeches sat hard on their stomachs, they had a relief party at hand in sample packages of Hawker's pills. The company have also published numerous testimonials from well-known people as to the merits of their remedies, and from leading druggists as to the enormous sales. In a word, they have reduced advertising to a science and compelled the attention of the provincial public.

As a matter of fact, no business can succeed in these days without the use of printers' ink and other methods of keeping in touch with the people. The Hawker remedies are now patented in Canada, the United States and England. The business of the company, enormous as it is, is only in its infancy. St. John has reason to be proud of such a promising industry.

Fall Work.

As soon as a spot of the garden soil is left bare after this time, either plow or dig it up and leave it rough so that the seeds of weeds will sprout, and in a week or two stir it up again. In this way much of next year's weeding may be saved. If the garden is to be in a new place it should be planned now and a heavy coating of manure spread on, and after the weeds have sprouted and the manure is leached go over it with a cultivator. The best time to kill weeds is when there is nothing else in the way. Cabbages and parsnips may be planted late in the fall, and if all the weeds that are in reach of the surface are killed before planting there will be little trouble with them next year. Speaking of manure, an old farmer used to say that it made less difference what it was than how it was. It must be fine and rotten and well mixed with the soil. The writer heard him make this remark many years ago when most of his neighbors thought that the clear, green manure was all there was about the premises that was worth handling, and would put a handful of the raw stuff from their heaps or cellars under each hill of corn and stamp it down with the feet before planting the seed. As they usually spread on a coating besides, they got good crops and thought it was mainly the result of the manure in the hill; but later methods have confirmed the statement of the farmer referred to, that if a shovelful of that green manure was mixed with two of soil and made fine and rotten, one of the three would be worth as much for the first crop. Some field crops which grow late in the season will make use of green manure but for the garden it will pay to have the plant food prepared beforehand, and this can be done by spreading and working in the fall, and in this way there will be no necessity of handling any extra material to mix with it.

Mr Henry Theakston, Secretary of the Y. M. C. A., Halifax, says: "I have used Puttner's Emulsion for simple and obstinate cough and general debility. In every case it has given the utmost satisfaction. I recommend it as a family medicine." ...

THE BENEFITS OF ADVERTISING.—That advertising is the greatest help to business success is pretty well shown by the account of the Hawker Medicine Company's methods, which we publish in another column.

We made a big purchase of grey flannels, and bought the lot a very low price. This week we are clearing the lot at very low prices. See the bargains.—W. A. Weeks & Co, next Beer & Goff's. oct2 3i
