Montague Given Newspaper Story

The "newspaper story" was brought to 20 Montague businessmen and women last night at a meeting held at Hill Side Inn.

Recent new developments to the Guardian-Patriot were outlined by W.J. Hancock, general manager, foremost amongst these being the amazing Photofax wire-photo equipment, a development which now brings the latest world and sport pictures to the Guardian-Patriot in a matter of minutes.

For example, a world news event breaking in Washington at midnight can be photographed and published in The Guardian-Patriot on the street by 2 a.m. while a picture taken during a Boston-Toronto hockey game can be in the newspaper office before the game itself is over.

He outlined the various improvements made by the newspaper with a view to improving its services to every reader, every advertiser and presented some views on still further improvements to come.

Other newspaper representatives on hand were Gordon Fairgrieve, advertising manager, who covered advertising services available and John Hayes, Guardian-Patriot advertising representative for the Montague area.

The guests at the meeting, including Mayor Bruce Yeo and Angus Jones, president of the Montague Board of Trade, were welcomed by James Gilmour, manager of the Montague branch of The Guardian-Patriot.

Commissionaires' Removal From Airport Is Protested

Members of the Corps of Commissionaires are no longer on duty at the local airport, it was learned yesterday, and strong recommendations are being made to Ottawa officials to have them retained and returned to duty.

F.B. Conrad, supervisor of the Corps here, said members at the airport had formerly been under the RCMP pay pur-purse, but that this month they had been transferred to the Department of Transport.

NEW POLICY

It was also learned that the latter has recently instituted a new policy of not employing Commissionaires at smaller airports and reducing the number of personnel at the larger ones. It is believed the effect is being felt in several other Maritime centres as well as across Canada as a whole, possibly as a part of austerity measures.

Mayor A. William Gaudet of Charlottetown stated he has been in telephone communication with the office of Hon. Angus MacLean, federal minister of fisheries, in an effort to have the local men returned to duty.

At the time the changeover in pay control was considered it is believed all levels locally strongly urged retention of the services of Commissionaires as being a valuable asset to the here. There were three regular Commissionaires on duty on 8-hour shifts and one relief man to permit the others a day off duty.

2nd ANNUAL AT MORELL

Meeker To Be Speaker At Sportsmen's Dinner

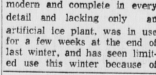

Howie Meeker, one of Canada's most colorful sports personalities, will be guest speaker at the second annual Sportsmen's Dinner, Wednesday night, Jan. 30, at Morell's new regional high school auditorium.

Meeker, now a sports director at St. John's, Newfoundland, played on four Stanley Cup championship teams for Toronto Maple Leafs before moving up to become the youngest NHL coach in history, for the Leafs. Meeker also found time to get himself elected to Parliament on a Progressive Conservative ticket during his NHL career.

He moved to Newfoundland from Toronto, and during his stay in St. John's had considerable success as a hockey coach and organizer, and as an all-around salesman for the game.

In December, he was in Charlottetown as chief instructor for the annual hockey clinic sponsored by the P.E.I. department of physical fitness.

Last year's first Sportsmen's Dinner at Morell, a project designed to help finance a new community rink erected last winter, drew an overflow crowd of approximately 200. This year, with the beautiful, new high school auditorium available, the goal has been set at upwards of 350 persons.

HOWIE MEEKER

modern and complete in every detail and lacking only an artificial ice plant, was in use for a few weeks at the end of last winter, and has been limited use this winter because of the mild weather that prevailed during the latter part of December and early January.

The official opening of the rink, originally scheduled for mid-January, was postponed because of the adverse weather until later in the season.

HEAVY LOAD

The Village of Morell, justifiably proud of its new arena, is faced with a considerable financial load to pay for the structure. Last year's sportsmen's dinner was a resounding success, exceeding the hopes of even the most optimistic supporters, and this year they are shooting for an even greater success.

The improved facilities provided by the new school, with its spacious auditorium, and the guest speaker of Howie Meeker's magnitude, give the project a good seed-off.

Cattle Invade Souris From Stock Pens

SOURIS — For about an hour or so yesterday afternoon, the town of Souris was invaded by a number of bovine tourists, who were taking in the sights around town.

The animals, 21 head of cattle and one sheep, had escaped from the CSR stock pens where they had been housed awaiting shipment to Nova Scotia.

Apparently one of the animals had attacked the gate and succeeded in knocking it clear off its hinges, and since the remainder to freedom. Six head of cattle refused the opportunity to escape.

The animals were finally rounded up and herded back to the pens by a number of citizens and CNR employees.

Souris Rink Re-opens

SOURIS — Following three shutdowns due to the mild weather, the Souris rink swung back into operation last night. To resume the winter activities, a skating session was held, and it is hoped that hockey in the town will again start up within a few days.

the mild weather that prevailed during the latter part of December and early January.

4th Kings PCs Meet

MURRAY RIVER — Fourth Kings Progressive Conservative Association held a well attended meeting at Murray River last Friday night. Speakers included Mrs. Margaret MacDonald, MP, William Whiteaway, Donald Craig and Cyril A. Mrs. MacDonald gave an account of the Parliament at present in the house and she was very happy to meet the committee members and others in the audience that had questions to ask or matters concerning their area to discuss.

Mr. Whiteaway and Mr. Craig agreed to carry on as Progressive Conservative representatives of the district until official candidates could be appointed.

KHRUSHCHEV

A screen of East German and Russian plainclothes men fanned out between Khrushchev and a Checkpoint Charlie, where U.S. military police and blue-clad West Berlin Police with automatic weapons had moved up to the Western side of the border.

For a few minutes the Soviet premier and Ulbricht stood talking together behind the barrier, then the group suddenly opened and Khrushchev waved and smiled at people on the West Berlin side.

On his way back to his official car, Khrushchev noticed three busloads of Western tourists waiting for clearance.

He stepped in his tracks, turned around, waved at the buses and said: "What are they waiting around for? Let 'em go and see."

PREMIER GRINS

Ulbricht continued walking but Khrushchev swung around and approached the tourist buses with an expansive grin on his face.

The driver of the first bus opened the doors and passengers swarmed around the Soviet premier. They were mostly Italian newspaper men and American servicemen on vacation.

Enjoying himself hugely, Khrushchev shouted to them: "Welcome, welcome."

The Italians crowded around Khrushchev, brushing aside his East German security guards and saying in visible Italian: "This is a great occasion for us, Signor Khrushchev."

Khrushchev slapped one or two on the back and said in Russian: "Does anyone speak English here?"

COLONEL PUSHED OUT

At this moment a uniformed U.S. Air Force colonel, who had remained seated inside the bus, was pushed out by his Italian counterparts and he hurried towards Khrushchev.

The premier leaned forward and grabbed the colonel's hand, exclaiming with a broad smile: "I wish you all the best in life."

This was translated into English by a German standing nearby.

The American — Col. G. A. Stiel — said briefly: "Thank you, glad to meet you," and clambered back into the bus.
