U.S. Supreme Court Upholds Feature Of Civil Rights Law

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U. S. Supreme Court has unanimously upheld the heart of the 1964 U. S. Civil Rigtts Act —the public accommodations section.

It also ruled that the act requires dismissal of charges made against civil rights sit-in demonstrators before the act was passed.

Jusiice Tom C. Clark wrote the main opinions in all three cases. All the other justices joined him in the public accommodations decision, but the vote on the sit-in prosecutions was 5 to 4 with a heated dissent by Justice Hugo L. Black.

In the first test of the controversial accommodations provision before the tribunal, the court ruled that "Congress possessed ample power" to enact the legislation under its authority to regulate interstate commerce.

The provision prohibits discrimination in such places as hotels, motels, theatres and restaurants.

Many of the Civil Rights Act's critics, including Arizona Senator Barry Goldwater, unsuccessful Republican candidate for president, had questioned the constitutionality of the public accommodations section.

TWO ISSUES CLARIFIED

The court dealt with two challenges of the section—one from Atlanta and a second from Birmingham.

In writing the opinion in the case brought up by an Atlanta motel, Justice Tom Clark said Congress' commerce power under the U.S. consitution was sufficient foundation for Monday's ruling.

"How obstructions in commerce may be removed—what means are to be employed—is within the sound and exclusive discretion of the Congress," Clark declared.

"It is subject only to one caveat—that the means chosen by it (Congress) must be reasonably adapted to the end permitted by the constitution. We cannot say that its choice here was not so adapted. The constitution requires no more."

The Heart of Atlanta Motel had filed suit in federal district court in Atlanta to block enforcement of the act within two hours after it had been signed into law by President Johnson on July 2.

After the section was upheld in district court, the motel's counsel appealed to the Supreme Court, arguing:

"The fact that Negroes are involved in this issue is purely incidental The fundamental issue is whether Congress has the right to take away from a private business concern the owner's choice of running his firm as he wishes and choosing his customers."

DISCRIMINATION OUT

Solicitor - General Archibald Cox, arguing in opposition, said Congress properly outlawed racial discrimination under its power to regulate interstate commerce. Cox contended this power enabled Congress to regulate local activity too.

The public accommodations section says that "all persons shall be entitled to full and equal enjoyment of goods, services, facilities, privileges, advantages and accommodations of any places of public accommodation as defined in this section, without discrimination or segregation on the ground of race, color, religion or national origin."

Clark's opinion in the case of a Birmingham restaurant, Ollie's Barbecue, said the question involved "cannot be confined to whether the public accommodations section of the law, "as applied to a restaurant receiving about $70,000 worth of food which has moved in commerce, is a valid exercise of the power of congress."

SCOPE NOT RESTRICTED

Clark went on to say that a lower federal court was in error in concluding that there was no connection between racial discrimination and the movement of interstate commerce. The judge noted that, in the companion Heart of Atlanta Motel decision, the Supreme Court stated that racial discrimination is not merely a state or regional problem, but is one of U.S.-wide scope.

Clark continued:

"Against this background, we must conclude that, while the focus of the legislation was on the individual restaurant's relation to interstate commerce, Congress appropriately considered the importance of that connection with the knowledge that the discrimination was but representative of many others throughout the country, the total incidence of which if left unchecked may well become far-reaching in its harm to commerce.

"With this situation spreading as the record shows, Congress was not required to await the total dislocation of commerce."

The sit-in decision freed three Negro demonstrators specifically involved in appeals. The court was told, during argument of the appeals by the three, that about 3,000 criminal prosecutions for sit-in demonstrations were still pending in southern states.

Black, in his fiery dissenting opinion, said that "the idea that Congress has power to accomplish such a result" as called for in Clark's opinion "has no precedent, so far as I know, in the nearly 200 years that Congress has been in existence."

Washington Plans To Drop All U.S. Army Reserve Units

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defence Secretary Robert S. McNamara has announced plans to wipe out all U.S. Army Reserve units and merge some with the National Guard. He said this will bring the reserve-guard system "into balance with the contingency war plans."

He told a press conference this "means there will be no more units in the reserve," although individuals who are not in units transferred to the guard will still be available for call-up.

He said he had insructed Army Secretary Stephen Ailes to prepare plans for realigning the reserve and guard forces "to improve significantly the early deployment capability and combat readiness of the United States reserve forces."

He estimated this latest reorganization would result in savings of about $150,000,000 per year.

"Under the plan, the paid drill strength will be 550,000 well-equipped, well-trained officers and men," he said.

This, McNamara said, would compare with the total of 700,000 now in the five reserve organizaions — 400,000 in the guard and 300,000 in the reserve.

McNamara said that Gen. Harold K. Johnson, army chief of staff, will develop the detained plans.

Zoo Polar Bear Has 10-Lb. Cub

QUEBEC (CP)—A 400-pound mother gave birth here to a daughter weighing between 10 and 12 ounces.

But since the proud parent is a polar bear the weight contrast is not considered outrageous.

What is rare about the birth, which took place in the Quebec City zoo, is the fact that it occurred at all.

Dr. J. A. Brassard, director of the zoo, said only five births involving captive polar bears have taken place, and these in the heated cages of United States zoos.

The birth here took place outdoors, with a pile of straw the only source of warmth. The mother has been at the zoo eight years.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 ♥	3 ♦
3 ♥	5 ♦	Pass	Pass
Dble	Pass	Pass	Redble

Opening lead — queen of spades.

Doubled and redoubled contracts are rare in good company, but here is a hand where at both tables in an important team match the final contract was doubled and redoubled.

At the first table, after East opened with a weak third-hand bid, South wound up in five diamonds redoubled on the sequence shown.

West led the queen of spades and continued with a spade, which declarer ruffed. South was in danger of suffering a substantial loss on the deal, but he played the hand boldly and succeeded in making the contract for a score of 650 points.

After chasing the A-K of diamonds, he led the king and another club, finessing the jack. When the jack held, he cashed the ace, and when the suit turned out to be divided 3-3, he then had no trouble producing eleven tricks.

However, South's team wound up losing 830 points on the deal, because at the second table the opposite North-South pair got to six diamonds redoubled and made it—due to an unfortunate opening lead The bidding went:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	Pass	2 ♦ (1)
Pass	2 ♠	Pass	3 ♦
Pass	5 ♦	Pass	6 ♦
Dble	Redble

West led the ace of hearts and this lead proved fatal. Declarer ruffed in dummy, played a club to the king, and then finessed the jack on the return.

After cashing the ace of clubs and discarding a spade, declarer ruffed spades and hearts back and forth, eventually losing only a trump trick to make the contract for a score of 1,780 points.

Of course, West could have defeated the slam had he led a spade originally instead of a heart. In that case, he would have been plus 400 instead of minus 1,780— and he would also have slept better that night.
