ELLEN'S DIARY

By An Island Farmer's Wife

"For length, these days don't amount to much" one of the Family commented this morning at breakfast. How good is the aroma of November breakfasts with the spell out of doors at the early choring to whet appetites!

Yet, if days are short, they still give appreciable time for the field-work. Now it is the harvesting of turnips which engages the skills of our farmers, hurrying a bit since a foretaste of frost, the vanguard of Winter's legions, commences to dog their heels.

We watched it down the lane and until we had bested the square dancing club yesterday evening. Guest of honor was Master Gregory Bohaker.

One day of this week, the brief respite well-earned, though appropriated with some reluctance, Rob went with kin to attend the Martins Fair on the mainland enjoying much the excursion and we doubt not learning something to help his farming as well.

And now end of Autumn... fall lies over the farmlands! That time of year when fields and trees await quietly and a little pensively the wrappings of Winter.

DOROTHY DIX'S COLUMN

Husband Has A Reason

Wife Entertains So Many Females He Seeks Quiet Away From Home

DEAR MISS DIX: I have a very good friend who is always saying that her husband never stays home. I could tell why, but she wouldn't believe me.

A HUSBAND NEEDS QUIET

ANSWER: Usually I am inclined to look somewhat askance at letters from "friends" who believe they can solve another person's difficulty, but your summing up of a problem seems exactly right.

DEAR MISS DIX: I'm 16 and considered attractive. However, my best friend, who is the same age and not pretty, has more dates than I have.

ANSWER: The difference must be in disposition. Perhaps you are more interested in yourself than in the boys—and boys do like to have a young lady's undivided attention.

DEAR MISS DIX: My father died three years ago, and my mother is lonely, as most widows are. Now I am planning to marry, but am afraid to leave my mother alone.

ANSWER: Your mother is still comparatively young (I assume she's no older than her early 40's), and perhaps you're a bit premature in putting her on the shelf.

Miss Nissen cannot reply personally to readers but will answer problems of interest through this column.

Canadian Consumer News

Mrs. H. E. Vautelet National President C. A. C.

"Knight Errant in Petticoats" is the heading of a full-page feature article in the October 24 edition of the "Toronto Saturday Night".

Mrs. Vautelet was born Renee Geoffrion, daughter of Aime Geoffrion, a noted King's Counsel, Her great-grandfather was Sir Aime Antoine Dorion, one of the founders of Liberalism in Canada.

A woman who is a critic of her own sex and yet retains the admiration and affection of other women is a rare being.

Today her chief cause is the Canadian Association of Consumers. She is one of its founders and as its National President, she brings to her new post a wealth of knowledge and experience in the women's field.

My Heart Lies South

by Elizabeth Borton de Trevino Pub. Crowell Co. N. Y. Reviewed by Ruhamah Scheinfeld Frank

This book is guaranteed to radiate a glow on the chilliest night. It is the chronicle of a lively Mexican family, of the more educated, prosperous class, as seen through the loving and often laughter-filled eyes of the American daughter-in-law.

A sense of humor is what the new Senora needed when her status was changed before she realized, from an American newspaper-woman on her own, to that of a helpless, feather-brained female, subject to the wisdom and commands of her husband.

It all happened in the first place, because her editor sent her on an assignment to Mexico, (incidentally, she had written a series of articles for the "Guardian" while on a visit here in 1929).

While on P. E. I. she met the late Mr. J. R. Burnett, editor of "The Guardian", who arranged to have her write a series of articles for his paper upon her return to Boston.

Mrs. de Trevino wrote four of the Pollyanna series of books for girls, besides many stories for magazines, and children's stories some of which appear in our public school readers.

She was for a time correspondent in Mexico for Time Magazine
