Dry Ice Sold
Winter Fog Cure
For Airports

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP)—A commercial airline says there is a way to get through the winter fogs which tie up many airports.

For this you need a small plane with a hole in it and some ground-up dry ice.

When fog stops the airliners, up goes the small plane. Once over the airport, the pilot begins shoving the dry ice pellets out a hole in the side or bottom of the plane.

United Air Lines says that more than 80 per cent of the time a corridor opens in the fog, big enough to allow liners to land and take off. Sometimes the corridor lasts all day.

Last winter United tried it 74 times at six airports and it worked 60 times. Some 5,500 passengers got through, including 2,000 on rival lines.

Northern airports in particular benefit from the procedure because their fog occurs at colder temperatures.

What makes it work is the dry ice, which is frozen carbon dioxide. It is 110 degrees below zero Fahrenheit when solidified. United officials say it works best when the fog occurs at temperatures between 24 and 28 degrees. This is called super-cooled fog.

This is what they believe happens: When dry ice pellets are released, they begin to turn to gas. This takes heat from the air. In this intense cooling moisture begins to collect into ice particles and to descend. They pick up other particles and eventually turn into a light snow. No fog remains.

REPORTER HEADS COUNCIL
TORONTO (CP)—Leon Kosser, 36, a newspaper man, has been appointed executive director of the Canadian Folk Arts Council which will organize centennial projects among various language groups across Canada. The projects will include performing arts and educational and historical programming. The council is assisted with grants by the centennial commission. An associate director will be based in Quebec.
