

A Strange Murder.

HIGHLY REALISTIC SCENE IN A FRENCH COURT ROOM.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—A great sensation has been caused by a peculiar murder trial in France, and it is feared that trouble may arise from the state of popular feeling. The trial took place at Lille et Ville ne assizes, and included an investigation into the manner of the death of a farmer named Beaudouin, who was killed while asleep in bed, under very peculiar circumstances. He was lying by the side of his wife, according to the statements made in court and yet she declared that she did not hear the noise of firearms, notwithstanding that the man was shot. His wife asserted that the first intimation she had of the murder was from the smoke from the weapon used to assassinate him and the blood which flowed from the wound made by the bullet. Her story did not receive general credence, even by those disposed in the woman's favor, but suspicion fell on a young man, a vagabond and a reckless character, named Brageul. Brageul was employed in some inferior capacity on the farm by Beaudouin, but was discharged by him, and at first it was supposed the murder might have been committed merely out of revenge. The fellow, on being arrested, however, not only confessed having committed the crime but asserted that he had been instigated by Mme. Beaudouin to kill her husband, and had been paid by her for the deed. The wife's reason, Brageul declared, for compassing her husband's death was his alleged flirtations with another woman. The murderer said Mme. Beaudouin admitted him by the window at night, and when he had entered the room, returned immediately to bed and laid down beside her husband who was fast asleep. Brageul was armed with a gun, which he rested across the woman's legs, in order to get a precision of aim, and so shot the man. The court room was the scene of a realistic sensational effect in the course of the trial. The judge had the blood stained bed brought into court and compelled the prisoners, the murderer and the wife, to assume the identical position which they occupied at the moment of the murder as described by Brageul. Notwithstanding the overwhelming evidence against Mme. Beaudouin, and the circumstantial proofs of her guilt, the jury committed her of complicity in the crime, and found Brageul guilty. The latter was condemned to imprisonment for life at hard labor. The greatest indignation prevails in regard to the view of the case taken by the jury from the absurdity of their idea that a man may be killed by being shot with a gun and with his wife lying close beside him sleeping soundly meanwhile.

THE INDEPENDENT. Religious and Literary Weekly.

THE INDEPENDENT is one of the best papers in the world. Its good points are many and striking. They have only to be stated to be appreciated; and for proof of our claims appeal may be taken to any of the fifty-two issues of the year. Any number of THE INDEPENDENT will show that its contents are marked by ABILITY, VARIETY AND INTEREST.—The great thinkers, the great story-writers, the great poets, men of the highest reputation in all departments of human knowledge, make up its list of contributors. Religion, philosophy, science, literature, art, history, discoveries, stories, and all conceivable topics are embraced in the contents, and every body, old or young, learned and unlearned, without regard to sex, employment or condition, will find something of special interest in every issue. GREAT PRINCIPLES.—It is a religious, a literary, an educational, a story, an art, a scientific, an agricultural, a financial and a political paper combined. BREADTH OF CANDOR, EARNESTNESS.—THE INDEPENDENT is true to no denomination; it is the organ of no clique or party in state or Church. It is free, therefore, to discuss all questions, and to speak its mind candidly. It is not swayed by fear or favor. It is a vigorous defender of the Evangelical faith, it preaches practical righteousness, and earnestly supports all moral reforms. All its columns—the advertising as well as the reading—are free from everything of doubtful or objectionable character. No matter what a person's religion, politics, or profession may be, if he desires to keep up with the times and know what the brightest minds are thinking of, the ablest pens are writing about, and what the world at large is doing—he should read THE INDEPENDENT.
