Gov't Hopes For Rail - Union Settlement

OTTAWA (CP) — The government hopes that "normal procedures of collective bargaining" will bring a satisfactory solution to the current contract dispute between the railways and unions representing their 130,000 non-operating employees.

Transport Minister Hees said Tuesday. Replying to a Commons query by Lionel Chevrier, former Liberal transport minister, Mr. Hees said there has been no breakthrough in negotiations.

Talks with federal conciliators had been adjourned for three days until Thursday. Mr. Chevrier referred to a press report which said odds are "heavily stacked" against averting a deadlock over union wage and welfare demands involving more than $100,000,000 a year for the railways.
