

A Medical Authority on Skating.

It is never safe in this country to speak of the enjoyment of any sport which depends on the weather in an anticipatory sense. At the moment of writing it seems not unlikely that the lovers of skating may find it possible to indulge their inclination at an early date; but when this sheet is in the hands of our readers, it may, for aught we can tell, be quite warm weather. What we have to say, therefore, is more general than particular, and relates to the exercise rather than to its performance. Beyond question skating is one of the finest sports, especially for females. It is graceful, healthy, stimulating to the muscles, and it develops in a very high degree the important faculty of balancing the body and preserving perfect control over the whole of the muscular system, while bringing certain muscles into action at will. Moreover, there is this about it, which is of especial value, it trains by exercise the power of intentionally inducing and maintaining a continuous contraction of the muscles of the lower extremity. The joints, hip, knee and ankle are firmly fixed or rather kept steadily under control, while the limbs are so set by their muscular apparatus that they form, as it were, part of the skate that glides over the smooth surface. To skate well and gracefully is a very high accomplishment, indeed, and, perhaps, one of the very best exercises in which young women and girls can engage with a view to healthful development.—The London (Eng.) Lancet.

Willing to Correct.

He walked into the office the other morning, looking pretty much like a man dissatisfied with general results. "Can I see the Editor?" he inquired. He was directed to the foot of the throne. "Good morning, sir," he began gruffly. "Mornin'," grunted the editor. "I came in," he proceeded, "to tell you of a misprint in the paper." "What is it?" "Well, I sent a notice around here that my friend Smith had just been married, and your infernal compositor got it. Mr. Smith has just been martyred." "Ugh, you call that a misprint, do you? Well, I don't, and I've raised that compositor's wages. If you don't like it, send Smith around to me 10 years from now, and if he wants it corrected I'll have it done." The visitor departed to see Smith. —[Merchant Traveller.

The Birth of a Prince.

A curious military point arose at the birth of the Prince of Wales. It had been the custom for the officer on guard at St. James' palace to be promoted to be major when a royal child was born. The guard was relieved at 10.45. At that hour the new guard marched into the palace yard, three minutes later the child was born. The question arose which officer was entitled to promotion. The officer of the fresh guard claimed it because the relief marched in before the birth and the keys were delivered over to him; but the other officer claimed it because the sentries had not been changed when the child was actually born. His men were still on guard, and he disputed the fact of the delivery of the keys, arguing that in all probability this had not occurred at the moment of the birth. Although there was no precedent, the old guard got it.

For His Sake.

Charley (to Clara, who has already eaten two dishes of ice cream)—Will you have another dish, dear? Clara—Thanks, Charley, no more. Charley—Just one more, for my sake? Clara—Well, for your sake, I will just take one more. To explain the apparent improbability of Charley's conduct it is necessary to add that the conversation did not take place at a restaurant, but at an evening party.

MANHOOD How Lost, How Restored.

CULVERWELL'S CELEBRATED ESSAY on the radical and permanent cure (without medical aid) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses. Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cts or two postage stamps. The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land. Address: THE CULVERWELL MEDICAL CO., 41 Ann St., New York. Post Office Box 450.
