Timely Notes On Fur Farming

Miscellaneous mutation mink drew good interest and prices held firm compared with the May levels at Hudson's Bay Company Fur Sales, New York, last week. A. total of 3093 dressed Stewart Breath of Spring platinum mink was reported 73 per cent sold bringing a top of $54 for males and $21.50 for females. Some 13,290 miscellaneous mutations were also 73 per cent sold and 18,960 miscellaneous skins were 74 per cent sold.

Advances of up to 10 per cent in better quality eastern type muskrats were noted at the closing sale of Canadian Fur Auction Sales Company, Ltd. The offering met with strong demand and keen competition. Eastern types advanced 10 per cent. Highest price in muskrat, 150,000 skins was $2.75 for New Brunswick Spring seal types. General prices were; New Brunswick Spring seal types $2.60 to $2.75; good weights $1.65 to $1.95; Ontario $2.50 to $2.70; othes $1.50 to $1.70.

Mink raiser Lynwood M. Atkinson's $100,000 damage suit against the Federal Government was settled out of court. Amount of the settlement was not disclosed. Federal court Judge Frank A. Pickard announced the agreement just before the scheduled start of the second day's hearing of Mr. Atkinson's charge that a low flying airforce plane was responsible for the loss of his mink-raising business.

At Philadelphia June 28 the old saying "the fur will fly", became a reality when mink confetti replaced the traditional ticker tape in greeting an estimated 1,000 people of the fur trade attending the International Fur Forum. Government officials were greeted early Wednesday afternoon by a motorcade which included about 30 convertibles decked with models who in turn were swathed in furs. The motorcade was estimated to contain one million dollars worth of furs. Heading is was a 1925 Model T Ford carrying a pretty girl wearing an old fashioned raccoon coat. Drivers in the motorcade wore coonskin caps. W. H. McFarlane impersonated Benjamin Franklyn in dress and was the official greeter. The convention concluded July 2nd.

There has been a gread deal of discussion in United States fur publications on nursing sickness in mink. Many believe it is caused by salt depletion and that the addition of extra salt will not only cure the sickness but will insure an ample milk supply for all females as soon as they whelp and throughoutl lacation period. However, Dr. W. L. Roberts states that extra salt definitely will not perform these miracles. There are a number of factors involved in nursing sickness and in complete and partial lactation failures. There is ample salt in the meat and fish usded in the mink ration to permit lactation if other conditions are right for lactation.

It is well established that a salt content of one-half to one per cent (dehydrated basis) is ideal for swine, dogs, foxes and similar animals. For example the National Research Council's Nutrient Allowances for swine are as follows: Growing and fattening pigs — 5 per cent salt. Young boars, pregnant gilts and sows — 5 per cent salt. Lactating sows and breeding boars 5 per cent sold. Since the food in this case is dry, the 5 per cent salt is essentailly on the dehydrated basis. The animal body is capable of adjusting itself to low and moderate levels of salt. Animals such as mink tolerate up to about 3 per cnt salt (dehydrated basis.) When the salt content of the food is low the animal body conserves salt to maintain the body processes. When the salt content of the food is high the excess salt is secreted, principally in the urine. A salt content of about 3 per cent (dehydrated basis) slows growth, and may produce various toxic symptoms. It would seem that high salt contents should be avoided particularly during the gestation period when there is already an extra stain on the kidneys. It appears therefore that a salt content of about 1 per cent (dehydrated basis) is more than adquate throughout the life cycle.

Infectious enteritis of mink has shown up in several anches in Ontario. It is caused by the same virus as that of infectious feline enteritis or one very similar, according to research done at Ontario Veterinary College. The school is now investigating the use of the feline serum and vaccine to control mink diseases.

Silver fox has been quite quiet in the world markets the past month and there has been no recent offerings of importance except those placed on the market in Montreal and London where the bulk of the collectioins were unsold. Wild furs have avidenced a moderate easing of price levels for some articles featured but muskrat has been in strong demand recently. Sustained continuing interest is shown in ranch mink of all varieties. From a marketing point of view the selling season is over for the current year and the year 1955 will go down in history as "theh fabulous mink era," which might conceivably never again be equalled in the future.

Fur Foods Cooperative, Fort Atkinson, Wis., has for the 13th time voted to sponsor the international mink show. It will be held in Milwaukee, Wis., next January 6——8. Show headquarters will be at the Schroeder Hotel.

From the flat treeless tundra country of the Lower Yukon and Kuskokwim comes a wild Alaskan mink bigger than any they caught in that strange and forbidding land of the midnight sun. They are among the largest caught anywhere. Not only do these mink have size. they also have a very, very dense fur which after dressing proves to be one of the softest mink available. To those unfamiliar with those mink upon first seeing it alive, the impression is that it is a coarse animal. Actually the Yukon and Kuskokwim mink do seem coarse but upon dressing them they come out to be a very beautiful skin. Because of its very heavy fur and large size and light weight it is a perfect mink for stole purposes as well as for exceptionally beautiful coats. The color generally is somewhat on the shade of a medium to pale pastel after they are dressed, although some of the skins are rather dark. Strange as it may seem the medium shades are usually the highest priced.

These mink have a tendency towards a blue-grey underfur which seems to be of a most desirable type. The color is very clear, especially on those caught in the mid-winter months. In the wild they go off color rapidly because they do not have the protection of foliage. After becoming off-color they are extremely red. Several ranchers, mostly in the eastern part of the United States, have been working with these wild Alaskan mink for the past seven or eight years. They have had great success not only in straight breeding but in crossing them with pastels principally. In most cases such crossing improves the size. On the average it definitely lightens the color. A few ranchers have bred these sild mink with every color phase possible and in most instances have improved the market value of the product. For its size these are perhaps the most gentle of mink to handle. They are extremely quiet in their habits.

In passing we might carry our fur farming friends back in memory to the days when Milligan and Morrison brought Alaskan silver foxes to Prince Edward Island and established a ranch at Northam. These foxes were very much larger than the native breeds. Their fur was somewhat coarser but they had an appeal. For some reason or other they did not breed well in this country and never got to be a real competitor of the native Prince Edward Island silver black fox.

British Coal Union Leaders Protest Policy

ROTHESAY, Scotland (Reuters) Leaders of Britain's 700,000 miners protested Wednesday against the government's policy of making their industry bear the cost of subsidized imported coal.

They declared at the annual conference of the National Union of Mineworkers here they would take "immediate steps" to remove this burden from the industry and charge it to the nation as a whole.

The matter of imported coal now is expected to be taken up by the 34 "miners members of Parliament."

LARGE IMPORTS

To close the gap between output and increasing industrial consumption, Britain is importing about 12,000,000 tons of expensive foreign coal a year, subsidizing it down to the price of home produced coal at a loss of over $100,000,000 a year.

This is paid by the coal board, ruling body for the nationalized industry.

British miners, who are planning new wage demands, shorter working hours and other benefits, oppose the charge to the industry because they feel it prevents the coal board from spending the money in other directions.

Seized For Pawning Money

CHICAGO, (AP)—A butcher who for about three years says he has been pawning money—and getting cash and pawn tickets—was seized by police Wednesday.

But police said they don't know what to do about it.

Sgt. John Doyle of the police pawn shop detail says pawning money didn't seem to make sense. But, he added, there is no law against it.

The man Doyle arrested in a south state street pawn shop, Joseph K. Johnson, 38, admitted pawning between $750 and $1,000 in 15 pawn shops in the last three years, mostly in small amounts.

Doyle said Johnson told him he would pawn $30 for example, and receive $27.50 and a pawn ticket. He never went back to redeem the money.

Johnson declined to offer any explanation for pawning money.

Doyle said Johnson told him he was a butcher and said he had served a prison sentence in Minnesota for forgery. He was held in the detective bureau overnight without charge.

Log Raft Reaches Mouth of River

CAP DES ROSIERS, Que. (CP) —A cedar-log raft, carrying three young adventurers who hope to cross the north Atlantic to Europe, arrived here Wednesday night to complete a 150-mile trip down the St. Lawrence river from Matane, Que.

Cap des Rosiers is on the tip of the Gaspe peninsula. The raft made the trip under the power of a tiny sail.

The adventurers will be joined there, probably today, by a fourth member of the crew, Bernard Saurieul, 24, who has been in hospital in Matane for the last few days with a leg injury.

Skipper Henri Beaudout and his men have travelled only about 550 miles since they left Montreal nearly a month ago. They were towed as far as Rimouski, and covered the rest of the distance by sailing and drifting. Beaudout — who plans to follow the Gulf Stream to Europe—said the trip is expected to take about two months.
