wards adult education and community improvement by rural

The Dairy Situation
Some disquieting features are at the moment becoming apparent in the dairy industry.

Increased storage holdings, increased production, with the prospect of lower cheese prices, diverting milk into butter all add up in the absence of export markets to an accumulation of butter which could be ruinous to prices were it not for the support price of fifty eight cents per pound.

The new eighty-pound cans dotted along the highway are an encouraging sign that changes are taking place and may well herald in the dairy industry a new era, blessed with emancipation, from the cream separator.

Association met on Tuesday, with their new president, A. H. Hubley producers.

Through the daily and weekly press and in magazines of large National circulation and by programs over the air, the various dairy products are being brought to the attention of the buying public and the results are clearly apparent in consumption figures.

Cropping Operations
Continued fine weather has facilitated the preparation of the soil for seeding and fields which were seas of mud a month later than this date last year are now in fine shape. Precipitation during the past six months has not been uniform over the Province and farmers in some areas, notably the Summerside, Preetown area, are concerned over the lack of moisture.

Clover and grass are making excellent progress and would appear to be further advanced by about two weeks than on the average.

Accident Insurance
Federation members and secretaries and chairmen in each school district are reminded that there are still numerous areas that have not taken the opportunity to have their members enrolled in the Group Accident Insurance Plan. The goal is an additional 300 for the month of May and those districts which have been contacted by the fieldmen are urged to have their members signed up and returns sent to the office as soon as possible.

with a man of 25. We have broken up several times— always at his instigation—and gone back together again. He says he loves me, and can't get me off his mind, but never a word about marriage. Our last break was three weeks ago, and we've had one date since. Do you think I should keep dating him, and do you think we'll ever marry?

ANSWER: The marriage prospects look rather slim. A man of 25 should have his mind made up after four years of dating one girl.
If he hasn't popped the question yet, I doubt if he ever will. By this time you have gotten to be a habit with each other, with the quarrels and reconciliations becoming routine stuff. A new man is my prescription.

DEAR MISS DIX: I met my husband five years before we married.
Prior to our marriage we got along fine, but since then everything is wrong. He's 28 and I'm 17. He's so jealous I can't step out of the house without him. He's a heavy drinker. Should I keep on living with him?

ANSWER: He sounds like quite a problem for a 17-year-old girl to bear with. If you aren't happy you could probably have your marriage annulled on the ground of your youth. You need competent advice from a responsible adult. If your parents can't fill the bill, take your problem to your clergyman, or a family counselor.
