

THE DAILY EXAMINER. OCTOBER 6, 1882.

The Marine Hospital.

THE Patriot is unnecessarily excited about the Marine Hospital. It is, doubtless, that excitement which prevents our contemporary from accurately stating the facts.

It is misleading to speak of Dr. Taylor as having been dismissed. It is more than misleading to suggest that in his case, there has been a removal for political causes. Appointed by the Mackenzie Government in 1874 (vice Dr. Jenkins, dismissed without cause), Dr. Taylor continued to hold his office for four years under the Conservative Administration.

It is well known that after the change of Government in 1878, strong pressure was brought to bear upon the Cabinet to remove Dr. Taylor for political reasons. True to the principle of having a stable civil service, Sir John Macdonald resisted this pressure at the cost of promoting disaffection within the ranks of his own party; and, putting country before party, he left Dr. Taylor undisturbed for four years. This will be an evident proof to any reasonable man, that Dr. Taylor has not been dismissed for political reasons.

A new arrangement has been made; and the office that Dr. Taylor held has been abolished. It is, we believe, not unusual, when the Government find a well conducted Hospital in any city, instead of building, equipping, and providing a staff for an institution, to arrange with the authorities of that Hospital to take charge of sick seamen on certain terms. The advantages of this plan are obvious; particularly in the smaller ports, such as Charlottetown, where the number of sick seamen is small and uncertain. The building and staff must be able to take charge of the largest probable number; and consequently for a great part of the time, will be larger than necessary. It is as though a farmer whose shearing of wool was small and uncertain, were to keep his own machinery to spin and weave it, instead of sending it to the factory.

No Government would, in this matter, be justified in sacrificing efficiency to cheapness. But no one will doubt that in the Charlottetown Hospital, patients will be, certainly as well, and probably better, treated than they are likely to be in a small special Hospital.

We scarcely like to insult the intelligence of our readers by meeting in advance arguments that bigotry may suggest. The Charlottetown Hospital has been in existence for three or four years. It has already proved of inestimable benefit to the community. Sick and in firm of all classes and of all denominations have been cured there, or have found a peaceful home in which to die. The freest access is given to ministers of all denominations to visit their own sick.

The arrangement now made is not a grant for indirect benefits, such as Governments sometimes give to charitable institutions. It is a clear business arrangement—a payment for direct services performed.

We believe the arrangement to be in the interests of the patients, whose interests are paramount; and, in the interests of the taxpayer, whose interests have a claim to consideration. No one is injured by it; no one slighted,—for there is no other hospital in Charlottetown which could put in an opposing claim.

Possibly it may not be judicious from the mere party politician point of view; but, as before, Sir John Macdonald puts country above party.

We have argued in favor of the arrangement, as we believe it to be the best possible for us. We understand, however, that it is only a temporary one.

Dr. Robertson's Election Petition.

Our amiable contemporary the Patriot is raging over the result of the King's County election, and his fire and fury again find vent in Wednesday's issue.

The statement which the Patriot puts forth is so wholly at variance with the facts that its inaccuracy is most glaring.

Knowing well that he could not resign his seat in the House of Assembly on the nomination day of the Dominion election, Dr. Robertson entrusted a bogus resignation to a man who had not been, and who he well knew had not been, legally elected a member of the Local Legislature. When these facts were brought before the Returning Officer, Dr. Robertson never attempted to contravert them. The Returning Officer might have returned Mr. McDonald as elected; but, acting under legal advice, he returned the whole facts to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, leaving both members to settle matters before a competent tribunal.

Dr. Robertson presented his petition; and this fact was announced with a flourish of trumpets in the columns of the Patriot. The law provides that Mr. McDonald should be served with a copy of the petition and that service could be effected in one of two ways—1st, By delivering a copy to him personally; or, 2nd, By leaving a copy at his dwelling-house with an adult member or inmate of his family—either of which the law declares must be done within five days after the presentation of the petition. In short, it was to be served within that time in the manner that a summons from the Supreme Court or the County Court is required to be served.

Dr. Robertson lives within a few hundred yards of Mr. McDonald. He knows where his dwelling house is. He gave the petition to a man whom he knows does not reside with Mr. McDonald, he gives it to him on the public highway, and he sends the man take it to McDonald Bros. & Co.'s store, and leave it there, well knowing, as he himself admits, that Mr. McDonald was not at home.

It is hard for anyone to believe that Dr. Robertson did not know how a summons should be served. But even supposing he did not, will it be alleged that Messrs. Davies, Sutherland & Weeks, did not? If the Patriot will say this, no one will believe it. Dr. Robertson left his Solicitor's office no doubt with the Petition in his pocket. He saw Mr. McDonald in Montague. He made no attempt to serve him. Mr. McDonald, when in Charlottetown, within five days after the filing of the petition, saw, and conversed with a member of the firm of Messrs. Davies, Sutherland & Weeks. To have handed him a copy of the petition would have been an easy matter. But it was not done. And why? Because there never was an intention of proceeding with the suit. It was simply a piece of bluff.

Robertson's petition was stuffed with allegations of bribery and corruption; and he dared not go to trial for he knew he could not prove them. He acted all through under the advice of counsel; and the result has been as they anticipated and what they intended. Dr. Robertson either desired to come before the court or he did not. If he did, his stupidity was such that he has shown himself unfitted for a position in the Commons, for the measure of his intelligence is below that of a County Court bailiff; and if he did not, as we believe he did not, then his charging Mr. McDonald with bribery and taking steps that the case could not be tried, shows such treachery and bad faith as morally to disqualify him from occupying even the Grit benches of the House of Commons.

As Judge Hensley remarked, "the law is clear and plain." No one can have any doubt of its meaning; and Dr. Robertson, with well-feigned earnestness, asked the court to save him from the consequences of his carelessness or his ignorance, and the court, of course, refused to do it.

Partridge Hunting in P. E. I.

One of the most delightful autumn recreations is to steal away into the forests, some sunny October afternoon, in search of partridges. We leave the mellow fields, now shorn of their ripened harvest, and enter a shady grove of beech and maple, gorged with gold and silver leaves. Have we crossed the borders of Fairyland? We sit down on a moss-covered log, our gun across our knees. Around us is the glorious forest, the leaves—sere, gold and crimson, and faded and yellow—falling to the ground as gently and softly as angels' blessings, and giving it a carpet, fairer, sadder, and more wonderful than any fabric of Indian looms. We gaze up from the tapestry of crimson leaves and glowing sunshine at our feet, through the open boughs overhead, to the fleecy clouds drifting across the deep blue sky, and fancy our lives almost in Paradise, and in the tent we hear that just stirs the leaves, we think we hear the soft flutter of the fairies' wings, though our Paradise, unlike that of an Eastern romance, is not peopled by blue-eyed, smiling, beckoning houris; but by sober-colored partridges, gray squirrels, blue jays, and hundreds of sweet song birds.

Hark! is that the light footstep of a wood nymph? No, it is the tread of a partridge on the dead leaves, and we are quickly awakened from our pleasant reverie—Bang! and the reverberating echoes proclaim that one "pat" has gone the way of all the living. And now we wander on and on every now and then the echoes waking to life, and telling the outside world with what success we are meeting. One, two, three, four, five partridges, have fallen by our deadly "toy," and now we see two, just ahead, one sitting on a log, in all his partridge pride, the other sunning herself on a little gravelly knoll. One with each barrel, and—by George, there's another stretching up her neck at our left. We load as quick as though our own life depended on every movement, and down she comes just as she raises her wings to fly. Six, seven, eight, and now the lengthening shadows warn us that it is time to start for home, and so, in good humor with ourselves and all the world, and better, perhaps for a few hours alone with nature, we sling our gun over our shoulder, and off we go.

For a quiet, peaceable, thoroughly enjoyable relaxation from business cares, we know of nothing as effectual as a ramble among the beeches and partridges in the glorious Indian summer, when all the landscape is bathed in sleeping sunshine; as, fancy free, we roam beneath the falling leaves, and let our thoughts wander wherever they will. There is no worry, vexation, care, toil, or rush, in an after-noon's partridge hunt, only calm, quiet recreation, and we advise those whose brains are aching from their daily toil, to try our favorite cure, and if they do not come back to their work in better spirits, we will hang up our gun and patiently submit to their railings.

Cardinal Manning on Drink.

Cardinal Manning is making himself conspicuous in the agitation against intemperance now going on in England. Under his auspices a temperance organization called the League of the Cross has been formed. At a meeting of this League, held recently in Leicester, he made an address, in which he stated that intemperance reform should be a religious movement. He also said that in England thirteen million people consumed intoxicating drinks, and ten million persons were drinkers to excess. This constituted a great danger, and the object of the League of the Cross was to afford shelter to men and women from this great national and social curse.

TELEGRAPHIC NEWS.

Prince County Exhibition! LIVE STOCK FINE. Potatoes Splendid.

Congratulations of the Governor.

The representative of THE DAILY EXAMINER left town yesterday for the purpose of giving our readers a full account—which will appear to-morrow—of the exhibition. We have just received the following telegraphic despatch from him:—

There is a great crowd at the Prince County Exhibition to-day. The show of horses, cattle and sheep was a fine one, and many of the animals would do credit to any exhibit in any part of Canada.

There is a splendid assortment of potatoes, one of the finest collections ever exhibited here.

The Governor and a number of visitors arrived in Summerside at about eleven o'clock, and at twelve o'clock His Honor received an address and opened the Exhibition.

The opening speech of the Lieut. Governor was an excellent one, warmly congratulating Prince County on the very creditable exhibit it had made.

Arabi in Trouble.

ANGLICISING EGYPT.

Special to the Examiner.

ALEXANDRIA, Oct. 5.

Arabi complains that good faith has not been kept with him regarding his surrender. He says that he surrendered to the English and expected to be tried by them in a fair and honorable way. He could easily have escaped, as he had many friends in the country, and he certainly would have escaped had he known that he would have been tried by Egyptians. He hopes that the English will place him on trial before an English tribunal.

News reaches here that England has promised the Khedive permission to recruit for the new Egyptian force in India. Applications had been made for the permission for some time past, but it was thought inadvisable to grant permission unless the Khedive provides that the whole force be placed under the charge of British officers. It is thought that the Khedive will readily accept the conditions.

News from France.

Tunisian Troubles—Asiatic Cholera at Mont Cenis Tunnel—Enlargement of Suez Canal.

Special Despatch to the Examiner.

FRANCE, Oct. 5.

Insurgent Arabs near Tunis have been very restless lately and are now assuming a threatening attitude. Many of the leaders are preparing a raid on the Algerian frontier, and the affair will cause much trouble to quell. Great anxiety is felt in military circles here over the trouble.

Asiatic Cholera has made its appearance on the French side of the Mont Cenis Tunnel, and is the cause of much alarm to the authorities. Special quarantine precautions have been established, and the mails are thoroughly disinfected before leaving the end of the Tunnel.

The English and French Directors have decided to enlarge and improve the Suez Canal, in anticipation of increased traffic.

THE BRAZIL RUPTURE

News from the Antipodes.

Another Revolt in Afghanistan.

Special Despatch to the Examiner.

LONDON, Oct. 4.

The fears entertained concerning a threatened rupture between Brazil and the Argentine Republic are now dispelled, and the charges are denied.

News has reached here that the Wool crop in Australia is much below the average, and will be the cause of some trouble. Gold industry is reviving, and there is quite a rush in some parts of the country. Reports from New Zealand state the government have authorized the floating of a loan of four millions sterling for expenditure on the public works of the colony.

News from India says that the Afghan troops have revolted against the Amer.

Arrests in Ireland.

Dillon Reconsiders.

Special Despatch to the Examiner.

DUBLIN, Oct. 5.

The man Flannigan and his wife were arrested at Cong, Ireland, for complicity in the murder of Lord, at Mount Morris, last September.

Dillon, the member of Parliament, and well-known land leaser, has promised to reconsider his resignation.
