

A GIRL HERO.

No, there was no nonsense about the brave-hearted girl; but as soon as she found herself alone and secure from observation, she threw her arms up, with a look of agony and despair upon the young face that was pitiful to see.

But it was not like Susie to remain idle while there was anything to do. Springing to work, she soon brought order and beauty out of the chaos that surrounded her. As her mother often remarked, with motherly pride, "every thing that Susie did was done well. Nor was there anything omitted now. The bed and the toilet-table were draped in the purest white, not a speck of dust could be seen upon the carpet, chair or bureau, while the mirror was polished until it glittered in the stray sunbeams that flickered through the vines that clambered over the window.

Knitting back with rose-colored ribbons the muslin curtains, Susie glanced around. How fresh and pure and sweet everything was upon which the eye rested. The room looked exactly as it did the preceding summer, when she used to steal softly up the stairs, as soon as she knew occupant was out, to see if all was as it should be, or to leave the flowers, of which he was so—a change that made that radiant summer morning as black and gloomy as a starless night.

She strove to recall to mind the words that made her think that John Harmon loved her, as man loves the only woman in all the world to him, but apart from the looks and tones, which made them so full of meaning to her, there was nothing in them, and she remembered how clearly she had let him look into the simple, trusting heart he had won.

She was roused from these humiliating reflections by her mother's voice calling to her from below. There was an unusual amount of work to do that day, for which Susie was not sorry, as it gave her what she needed most in this painful crisis of her life—no time to think.

"Where are you going, Susie?"
"Susie paused by the open door-way of the room, where her mother was sitting. "Down to Blackberry Hill for some berries. There are none for breakfast, and you know Mr. Coles wants them at every meal."

"But you are looking tired. And no wonder; you've been on your feet all day."

"I'm not in the least tired."
There was more than weariness in that look and tone, and for the first time a dim revelation came to the mother's heart of all that was going on beneath that quiet exterior.

"What is it, then?"
"A little headache, which a walk in the open air will drive away."

Many and many a day afterwards, did Mrs. Barnard recall her daughter as she stood there, a basket in hand, and her broad brimmed hat, with its wide drooping ribbons in the other. As she reached the gate, she looked back on her with a smile such as an angel might give upon the threshold of paradise.

"Let me go!" cried the eager voice of her little brother Willie.

Susie would rather have gone by herself, but she could not reject the brown clubby hand that was thrust into hers. So the two walked along together, finally striking into the railroad track, that was the most direct way to Blackberry Hill.

"They had gone but a short distance when Susie saw upon the track just ahead of her, a pile of rocks, earth and gravel, which had evidently fallen from the steep embankment which loomed up high above her head.

The express train, with its precious freight of human lives, was nearly due, and for a moment Susie stood motionless with horror and affright. Then she seized her little brother's arm.

"Will, do you see those men in the field yonder? Go and tell them that something has fallen upon the track. The train will soon be here; run for your life!"

He had gone but a few rods, when Susie's straining gaze caught a glimpse of it in the distance, and dropping her basket, the heroic girl walked steadily forward toward the rapidly advancing train. Then suddenly pausing, she held her hat, with its fluttering ribbons, high above her head.

The Greatest Medical Discovery since the Creation of Man, or since the Commencement of the Christian Era.

There never has been a time when the healing of so many different diseases has been caused by outward application as the present. It is an undisputed fact that over half of the entire population of the globe resort to the use of ordinary plasters.

DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTERS are acknowledged by all who have used them, to act quicker than any other plaster they ever before tried, and that one of these plasters will do more real service than a hundred of the ordinary kind. All other plasters are slow of action, and require to be worn continually to effect a cure; but with these it is entirely different; the instant one is applied the patient will feel its effect.

Physicians in all ages have thoroughly tested and well know the effect of Capsicum; and it has always been more or less used as a medical agent for an outward application; but it is only of very recent date that its advantages in a porous plaster have been discovered. Being, however, convinced of the wonderful cures effected by DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTERS, and their superiority over all other plasters, they now actually prescribe them, in their practice, for such diseases as rheumatism, pain in the side and back, and all such cases as have required the use of plasters or liniment. After you have tried other plasters and liniments, and they have failed, and you want a certain cure, ask your druggist for DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTER. You can hardly believe your own convictions of its wonderful effects. Although powerful and quick in its action, you can rely on its safety for the most delicate person to wear, as it is free from lead and other poisonous material commonly used in the manufacture of ordinary plasters. One trial is a sufficient guarantee of its merits, and one plaster will relieve hundreds to your friends.

Ask your druggist for DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTER, and take no other; or, on receipt of 25 cents for one $1 for five, or $2 for a dozen, they will be mailed, post paid, to any address in the United States or Canada.
