Expenses of the Board of Health

A citizen writes to THE EXAMINER as follows:

"A subject of serious import to the citizens at the present time is the question who is liable for the debt contracted on account of the smallpox epidemic,—the Government or the City Council? not being a lawyer, I don't pretend to give a legal opinion, but common sense tells me that the Government is liable, since the Board of Health is their creation. Please have this subject ventilated as it involves a matter of fifteen thousand dollars."

It will interest our correspondent and perhaps, others, to read the following opinion of His Honor the Recorder on this point.

CHARLOTTETOWN, 20th April, 1886.

To His Worship the Mayor.

SIR,—I have carefully looked into the question as to the liability of the city for the expenses connected with the late smallpox epidemic.

There is no doubt that the primary liability rests on the Executive Committee of three, chosen by the Board of Health. This is settled by the Statute 14 Victoria Chapter 5 Sec. 8, which enacts in respect of such Committee, "and who shall and may sue and be sued jointly, or the survivor or survivors of them for any contract or engagement entered into by them in fulfilment of their duties."

All Boards of Health in the Province, including that of Charlottetown, obtain their powers and authority from the Statute above referred to. The City Board of Health has no necessary connection with the governing body of the corporation; indeed many of the powers given to the Board of Health under the Provincial Act are wholly beyond the authority of the Corporation and in the case of such a general epidemic as that of last fall, the Corporation as such, under the general powers given it by its Charter or Act of Incorporation, would be powerless to act in such a way as alone would stay the spread of the disease.

Again, it is undoubted that within a limited sphere the Corporation have authority over the health of the City, and to prevent "the spread of infectious or other diseases," and their officers or servants in such cases would look to the City for indemnification for outlay and expenses incurred. It is, therefore, extremely difficult to answer definitely as to whom the Executive Committee of the Board of Health should look to to reimburse them for each particular item of expenditure. The Statute 19 Victoria, Cap. 18, Sec. 3, expressly gives the City Board of Health "the same powers and authorities as are now vested in the Boards of Health for the different Counties of the Island." Now, one of the provisions of this Statute reads as follows:—

"And in order to defray the expenses incurred by the said several Boards of Health respectively, or their said committees in and about this section, or of any part of this act, the Lieutenant Governor is hereby authorized and empowed by, and with the advice of Her Majesty's Council, to grant a warrant on the Treasurer of the Island for the payment thereof so soon as the same shall be ascertained by the said Committees or Boards respectively, and duly certified to be correct."

This enactment, taken with other parts of the Act, clearly shows that the burden of the cost is to be borne by the Province, out of its general revenues, and not by the district, city, or place wherin the epidemic existed. I see no reason why an exception in this particular should be made in the case of the city. It, as a city, has no control over the expenditure. It is compulsory on the Board of Health to perform its duties under the Povincial Statute—not under the direction of the city authorities—and all fines and penalties received under this Act for breach of any of its provisions must be paid "into the treasury of the Island for the use and support of the Government thereof."

It appears to me that a distinction will have to be drawn between the acts of the officers of the Corporation—as for instance, those of its own health officer—and the acts of the Board of Health and its medical officers appointed by the Provincial Government. In the first case the liability of the city exists at any rate as between itself and its employes, and in the second case I am of opinion that the Board of Health in this city, acting under the powers conferred upon it by the Provincial Statute, not by the act incorporating the city, must look for re-imbursement for all salaries, outlays and expenses to the Provincial Treasury. I would advise, therefore, that the Executive Committee after having duly certified all accounts rendered, forward them to the Provincial Government, and on conference therewith, classify and agree to the amounts to be borne by each respectively.

I have the honor to be,
Your obedient servant,
R. R. FITZGERALD,
Recorder.

Experimental Farms.

An experimental farm is to be established near Ottawa by the Dominion Government; and Professor Saunders advises that there be a "sub-station" for the Provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward Island, and a sub station for Manitoba, the Northwest Territories, and British Columbia respectively. Professor Saunders also advises that the central station shall have in connection with it at least four hundred hundred acres of land, and the sub stations, at least two hundred acres each—except in the Northwest Territories, "where land is so abundant and cheap, there should be not less than a section of six hundred and fifty acres belonging to each station, so that there may be land sufficient to carry on experiments in stock raising and forestry on such a scale as the circumstances of each case may require."

The whole should, he says, be under the control of one head, known as director or chief, whose residence should be at the central station, and whose duty it should be to visit the sub-stations as occasion required, and, in conference with the managers of the sub-stations, arrange for the course and character of the work to be carried on at each, subject to the approval of the Minister of Agriculture.

At the central station there would, Professor Saunders says, be required in addition to the director, a superintendent of agriculture, charged with the care of farm stock and the dairy and field experiments; a superintendent of horticulture, who should conduct experiments in fruit and vegetable growing, in determining the vitality and purity of seeds, and have charge of the nursery and propagating houses; a superintendent of forestry, who should direct all forestry experiments, and inquire into all questions relating to tree culture and tree protection in the Dominion; an entomologist, whose duty it should be to investigate the habits of insects destructive to farm and garden crops, fruit, etc., as well as those affecting animals, with the view of testing such remedies as may be available for their destruction; a botanist, to whom should be entrusted the special duty of investigating the injury done to field and garden crops, fruit and forest trees, by the lower forms of vegetable life, such as fungi, rusts, moulds, etc., to study the character and modes of growth of the noxious weeds prevailing in all parts of the Dominion, with the object of devising means for their subjugation or destruction,—he should also take charge of the botanic garden or arboretum, and of that portion of the central museum illustrating vegetable products; a chemist, to whom should be referred all questions relating to agricultural chemistry, such as analyses of fertilizers, the determination of the chemical constituents of any substances which it may be desirable to use in experimental work in feeding,—to make analyses of milk in connection with experiments in dairying, of wheats, to determine their relative quality for milling, and to have charge of all other subjects requiring special chemical investigation in connection with the work being carried on at any of the stations; a veterinary surgeon, whose services should be available when required for the treatment of diseases of animals at any of the stations, and whose duty it should be to study such diseases and prepare and submit a yearly report thereon.

The officers required at each of the sub-stations would, in his opinion, be a superintendent of agriculture and a superintendent of horticulture. The superintendent of agriculture to be chief of the station, subordinate only to the director, and responsible to him for the proper government of the station and for the due performance of all work directed to be undertaken. The superintendent of horticulture and all other employes to be subordinate to the superintendent of agriculture, and under his direction,—the outlying stations to report to the director as often as required, and the reports of the officers of all the stations to be presented through the director to the Minister of Agriculture.

These experimental farms will, if established, be a result of the report of Mr. Gigault's Parliamentary Committee of 1884. Acting on that report, the Minister of Agriculture commissioned Professor Saunders, of London, Ont., to visit the experimental farms of the United States. Having done so, Professor Saunders advises, as above.

The adoption of the scheme will necessitate a large outlay of public money; but the development of agriculture is a matter in which public money may well be prudently expended.

Heroism of an Islander.

THRILLING EXPERIENCES IN THE TERRIBLE SAUK RAPIDS CYCLONE.

THE "C. F. Harris" mentioned below is a son of Mr. W. H. Harris of the Post Office in this city. The extract is from the Daily Review Press of Indianapolis, which gives a full description of the terrible cyclone by which the town of Sauk Rapids was destroyed and sixty-two persons killed:

"The most remarkable and thrilling experience that any eye-witness or survivor of the terrible affair encountered was that of C. F. Harris and W. R. Mullet, insurance men of Minneapolis. These gentlemen are the agents of the American Life Insurance company and of the Minnesota Mutual Benefit association, and were in Sauk Rapids engaged in soliciting business. They had taken a policy on one business man and arranged with Dr. Jenks to go and make an examination of him, and at the time of the visit of the cyclone were in Shorber's drug store, talking insurance to the proprietor and to Hunniwell, the banker. While engaged in the effort of effecting an insurance on the lives of these gentlemen, Edgar Hull of St. Cloud and E. F. Halburt, the insurance man of St. Paul, came in. About that time the cyclone announced its approach by a few preliminary warnings in the shape of a few sharp reports and a heavy, rumbling noise. The attention of the party being attracted, they all rushed to the street, and there beheld the rapid coming of the funnel-shaped monster and closely observing the direction it was travelling, started away from it, running as fast as their legs could carry them. After running for a block Harris looked back to see what had become of his partner Mullett, who is a cripple, and found that he was several hundred feet behind, and making but little headway. Here true heroism was exhibited by Harris, such as is seldom witnessed. Forgetting himself entirely he nobly started to rescue his friend and partner. Mullett was but a short distance ahead of the huge destroying funnel when Harris grasped him by the hand and hurried him along, both scudding before it. They turned and ran to the Central house, gaining an entrance and closing the door after them. Inside the hotel they made for the dining room, and just then the front of the building began to go, the windows giving in first, soon followed by the total collapse of the entire structure. When the pair reached the dining room door it was locked, or else in such shape it could not be opened, and they frantically grabbed at another door adjoining, which luckily opened at their touch. It proved to be the stairs to the cellar, and Harris pushed Mullett in, and he safely reached the bottom. He was followed by Harris, but before the latter could get down the steps the entire building came down on top of them. Harris was knocked down and covered up by some falling mass, and lay buried beneath it for a moment, but it appeared to him to be hours. He freed himself by a desperate effort, and soon released himself from his living tomb, and gazed with horror upon the surroundings and the scene of death and devastation which he saw. He found Mullett standing a short distance off, brushing the dirt from his clothes, and apparently but little the worse for the terrible adventure. Although both were bruised and bleeding, they escaped with but little injury, and at once began to look about to assist others less fortunate.

Boston Markets.

BOSTON, April 21.

POTATOES—Potatoes are firmer, with sales of Houlton Roses and Hebrons at 65c. per bushel. Other Eastern are selling at 58 and 60c., and most of the Northern stock ranges from 50 to 60c.

FISH—There continues to be a depressed feeling in the Fish market, and it is hard to sell round lots of Mackerel, Codfish or Pickled Herring at any reasonable price. There is no sale for Mackerel, and prices are entirely nominal.

OATS.—The market has continued firm and prices are higher. No. 2 white sold at 43⅞ and 44c; and fancy clipped white at 46½ and 48c. per bushel. In futures sales were made yesterday of 8,100 bushels, July delivery, at 41⅝c. per bushel.

EGGS—The market has ruled steady the past two days, with sales of Eastern extras at 14c., and Western and Northern at 13½c. per dozen. Duck and Goose Eggs easy.

The latest reports in regard to the work of the Minnesota cyclone place the number of killed at 75 and of wounded at 215. At Sauk Rapids workmen are clearing away the debris, and the owners are preparing to rebuild stores and residences. Among the the freaks of the cyclone were the wafting of a suit of clothing from a tailor shop at Sauk Rapids to Brainerd, Minn., 62 miles distant; carrying a headstone from a graveyard to St. Cloud across the Mississippi, and landing it three miles away. Also a safe weighing 1,500 pounds, was carried 400 feet.

[WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER.]

Spring.

BY MRS. A. D. MACLEOD.

The fiat hath gone forth;—
From Winter's nerveless grasp
The frozen chains unclasp,
King Freedom rules our North.

From out his long repose
Fair Ocean sings again;
Low wail, or sweet refrain
In every breeze that blows.

Ah cruel Ocean, sing!
Upon thy furrowed shore
Leal hearts and loved, of yore
Beat high in life's young spring.

Flash out, thou sportive wave!
Upon thy glistening tide
They dared a world so wide;
And found for fame—a grave.

See! from the listening hills
The whitened mantle glides;
Whilst 'gulfed in full spring tides
Are lost the murmuring rills,

Ring out, ye woodland notes!
Trill through the bright'ning blue,
Loud swell the anthem new
Which nature heavenward floats.

For zephyr fanned river,
For gently swaying trees;
Voice, in each passing breeze
The praise of life's Great Giver.

Now firelights lurid gleam
Gives place to greening slope
Where youth, miraged of Hope,
Sees golden vistas beam,—

Hails in each star of eve,
Each lustrous, length'ning day
Of joyous roundelay,
A world where none may grieve.

Blessed morning of the year!
Lone sickness greets the voice
Which waketh to rejoice,
From high to lowliest sphere.

The tiller of the soil
Goes forth, in purpose strong;
For Spring's exultant song
Wreathes round the head of toil.

Earth, nurture well the seed;
Sun, swell the golden grain;
Heaven, sap the thirsty plain;—
Till Plenty answers need.

Breathe out, Oh genial Spring!
Thy teachings over all;
Till Heaven's glad peace shall fall
Where Earth's vain tumults ring.

Then shall the beauteous story
On Nature's wondrous page,
Light each succeeding age,
And flood the world with glory.
