ELLEN'S DIARY

Mild Breezes Of Summer Bring Final Scent Of Lilac

The early summer days we have now — a gift of the year. So beautiful they are. Days to hear a last frog's tune, to catch a final breath of lilacs' perfume, before going on to enjoy the fulling of the meadow blossoms and the garden's flowerings so sweet.

Summer takes away — and gives.

Would you believe it? This spring I never saw the apple blossoms fall!" one said recently, a regret in her words. "I've been just too busy I guess."

"There'll be rose petals" we reminded her.

"And I surely will take time to enjoy those."

Lovely now the days are, and the long evenings with the afterlight lingering on the fields as though reluctant to go. Inspiring to see, and have. "On evenin's when the southern breeze comes soft an' sweet and mild" one says "just clingin' an' caressin' like the fingers of a child, it brings a kind of longin' to a feller's heart to be at peace, an' feelin' full of love t'wards all humanity; it thaws out all the hardness an' the spite he's stored away an' charged 'gainst some that's wronged him, to be used some other day, it makes him mild an' yieldin' so he hardly could refuse a favor to most anyone ev'n if he knows he'll lose." "The brids and the bees are busy, an' the trees an' growin' things are spread with all the soft new line an' beauty summer brings. It all acts like a tonic—brightens up old friendships an' helps new ones get a start; it helps a feller see the works of his Creator's hand; he gets a glimpse of mightiness that men can't understand — that is if, he is a farmer, with a real farmer's heart — when the mild breezes of the early summer start."

Mack and his classmates completed writing the Grade Eight examinations this afternoon, somewhat weary with the toil of recent days, and obviously well pleased to have done with the chore.

"I'd rather drive the tractor at the farming, till every bone in my body aches, and my eardrums are fit to burst from the noise of it, than have to go through even one day of that again!" he grinned half-seriously this evening. "The first morning my pen was —well, it didn't seem to want to work. And by today, I didn't much care whether it would or wouldn't!"

"You were in a state of-what would you call it?" Granddaughter queried with a sisterly chuckle.

"Call it what you like" he smiled.

"I suppose" she reflected, "that comes, more or less, to every student who writes tests."

"The daisies — have you seen them? They're in bloom now in the field across the creek" Alex reported this morning." And I'd say those are baby-swallows sitting up on that wire! Oh dear" he sighed happily "there's so much to see now!"

And the night, graced by moon and starlight enfolds our world, puts gentle arms about it, at the close of this early summer day.

Until tomorrow — Diary — — Good-night.....

Tulips And Daffodils Form Annandale Nuptials Setting

Tulips and daffodils were the setting for a pretty spring wedding so'emnized at Annandale United Church when Eleanor Suzanne, R.N. daughter of Mrs. and the late Mr. John Norton of Annandale, became the bride of John Richard MacMillan, son of Mrs. and the late Mr. Shaw MacMillan of Alberry Plains.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. M.R. Pocklington. Mrs. Alex MacFarlane, organist, accompanied Roy Howlett, who sang "O Perfect Love" during the signing of the register.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Howard Norton, wore a floor length gown of white nylon over taffeta. The fitted bodice featured scoop neckline and long sleeves ending in lily points. Her shoulder length veil was held in place with a tiara of pearl flowers and lace leaves. She carried a cascade of pink roses with sprays of stephanotis entwined with ivy. Her jewellry included pearl earrings, a gift of the groom.

Pauline MacLean, classmate of the bride was maid of honour and Edna MacMillan, sister of the groom was bridesmaid. They wore identical street length gowns in green and gold, each with matching headpieces, mitts and shoes. They carried nosegays of white American mums with white ribbon and streamers.

The groom was attended by his brother, Fred MacMillan. Gerald Norton, brother of the bride, and David Townshend, friend of the groom ushered the guests to pews marked with white satin bows.

Mrs. John Norton, mother of the bride, wore a printed silk dress of green, grey, and white with matching duster. She chose white accessories and wore a corsage of white carnations.

Mrs. Shaw MacMillan, mother of the groom, wore a printed green silk dress with green and white accessories and wore a corsage of white carnations.

Following the ceremony, a reception for 50 guests was held at the Kingsway Motel. The bridal table was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom under an arch of lily of the valley and white bells. The centerpiece was of pink carnations and American mums.

Rev. M.R. Pocklington said grace and proposed the toast to the bride with the groom giving the response. The guest book was circulated by Mrs. Allison Saunders.

For a wedding trip to the Annapolis Valley, and other points of interest in Nova Scotia, the bride wore a three piece beige suit with green accessories and wore a corsage of yellow roses.

Telegrams were read from Mr. and Mrs. Barry Westhaver, Prince Rupert, B.C., sister of the groom; Mrs. Thomas Graham and Mr. John Norton both of Prescott, Ont., sister and brother of the bride.

The bride and groom will reside in Keppoch for the summer months.

WOMEN'S ORGANIZATIONS

Clermont WI Entertains 36th Annual Convention

The 36th annual convention was held at Malpeque Hall and comprised the area at Clermont, Baltic, Darnley, Hamilton, Indian River, Malpeque, Sea View and Spring Valley.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Cecil Mill, and the convention opened with O Canada and the Mary Stewart Collect. Mrs. Allan Murphy welcomed the guests mentioning the theme for this years conventions: Pride in the Past-Faith in the future.

Mrs. Earl MacKay replied to the address of welcome. The minutes of the 1962 convention were read by the secretary, Mrs. Albert Stafford, and approved.

The reports of the secretaries were read and showed a good deal of work accomplished in the various institutes during the year. Mrs. Henry Wedge was introduced by the president. Her subject was juvenile delinquency She spoke of the years that she served as a probation officer in U.S.A. and stated that, at one time neglected children and teenagers, were tried in adult courts. The judges there were concerned about this, and brought about the birth of a juvenile court. She further stated a probation officer's duty is aimed at prevention rather than prosecution and said all children need firm supervision and parents who will give them tender loving care.

Hamilton presented their guest speaker Raymond Smith of Seeman Bros. Canada who gave a demonstration on the preparation of food for the home freezer and he stated that home freezers were not an economy but were definitely an asset, because the nutritive value of food was conserved, without harmful additives and the food should be done in small quantities, he added, blanched properly, wrapped and sealed to exclude the air. He gave a resume of vegetables and fruits which could or could not be frozen successfully and gave an invitation to all Institutes present, to come on a tour through the frozen food plant at New Annan.

Darnley gave an explanation of exhibits and stated all the articles on display were for sale.

Edson Rayner, Clermont, was then introduced by the president. He spoke on behalf of the Board of Trade in Kensington. Mr. Raynor said that Kensington is in need of a travel Bureau to cater to tourists, and urged the women present to help promote the Handicraft Centre, because it could not materially or financially survive unless it is supported. He reviewed the previous years work and said he felt that more effort work could be done this year, by remembering past difficulties and improving upon them.

Mrs. Arthur Campbell, member of the Provincial executive spoke on the History of the Institutes and stated, this year's convention in Charlottetown is the 50th Anniversary. A special highlight of this years program would be an Historical pageant She gave a short resume of some institutes and their cultural activities, and asked all members to be Institute boosters.

A sing-song was led by Indian River. Malpeque presented their speaker Mrs. Wilton Ramsay, who read a paper on the duties of teachers, years ago and pointed out the tremendous changes in teachers' duties over the years.

Mrs. T. L. MacMillan spoke on home nursing and said that a 10 week course is available and provides simple training which eliminates uncertainty when illness strikes. She felt such a course would be a boon in a national emergency and felt that it would relieve the pressure on crowded hospitals and doctors.

Miss Alphonsine Therriault, brought greetings from the provincial executive. She spoke on the Tweedsmuir Competitions and explained that a sampler designed from one's own imagination would be more apt to win than one copied. She told members how to place the designs on the material and urged them to enter the competition.

Mrs. Lloyd Campbell moved that a vote of thanks be extended to all the guest speakers.

A stocking contest was held by Belle Institute. Three ladies were seated on the platform, blindfolded, and oven mitts were put on their hands. The contest was to find out which one could get the nylon stocking on first Mrs. Hilda Ramsay was the winner.

Two resolutions were brought in, one concerning the erection of a institution for the chronically ill in Prince County, and one concerning travelling expenses for delegates to the convention. Both resolutions carried. Collection amounted to $9.25, and will be sent to the retarded children's fund.

Convention expenses came to $16, and were shared equally by all institutes. The singing of God Save The Queen closed the meeting. Malpeque WI catered for a ham and salad supper served to about 60 delegates.

LOT 16 U.C.W.

The June meeting of the Lot 16 U.C.W. was held at the home of Mrs. T. C. Hutchinson with 15 members present. The meeting opened by repeating the purpose in unison.

The worship service was conducted by Mrs. W. P. Miller with the theme "Every time I feel the Spirit" and was based on hymns written by a blind man, George Matheson. These hymns were read in unison and were "O Love that will not let me go," "Peace, perfect peace," "Blest be the tie that binds," and "Strength of all the weak." Scripture and prayer closed the devotion period.

Mrs. Jack Yeo read an article on the hymn, "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name," giving the interpretation of the writer, referring to it as a coronation — the coronation of the King of Kings and Lord of Lords — Jesus Christ.

Mrs. Roger MacLean vice-president, presided for the business period. It was decided not to have any meetings for July and August. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Harold MacLean. The worship will be in charge of Mrs. Kenneth MacLean and Mrs. Larry Yeo.

Lunch was served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. John Yeo, Mrs. Garth MacLean and Mrs. Gordon Campbell.

MARY HAWORTH

Further Opinions Voiced On Parent's Aid To Family

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Most of the time I think your advice is very good. But two recent instances annoy me.

First there is the case of R.D. who stayed away from a double-header family party for her nephew and his girl cousin, making their first communion. She was only slightly acquainted with the parents of the girl, hence didn't feel she owed the girl a gift. So, to avoid an awkward situation, she excused herself.

Next day R.D. called on her sister-in-law (one of the hostesses), taking a gift to the nephew, and was told their friendship had folded. She sought your comment. You said she was at fault in by-passing the party just to get out of the second gift. How do you know? Maybe she couldn't afford a second gift.

She's well rid of such relatives interested only in what they can get, like those brides and graduates who send invitations to 42nd cousins; for what?

The second instance, signed C.D., is the case of parents with current income of $11,000 per year, whose married son, 29, wants cash recompense from them for the schoolings he earned for himself during years when they couldn't afford to pay his way. He studied abroad and at Harvard with the help of scholarships and soon will have his Ph.D.

They are refusing his request and ask your opinion. You say they don't owe him a cent on the grounds he claims. I disagree. It is good for young people to struggle a little, but we should do for them what we can. Eventually they will inherit what we have. So why shouldn't we enjoy giving them some happiness now? I think these well-off parents are just plain stingy.

A.P.

DEAR A.P.: Our correspondent Mrs. R.D. wasn't a hardship case. She and her husband, apparently childless, belong to the middle class, I surmise, probably in the "white collar" income bracket. Thus it is illogical to argue, as you do, that she couldn't afford a second gift for the first communion celebration.

A pretty white handkerchief would have been a suitable gift for the girl, at a cost of $1 or less to the careful shopper.

But R.D. evidently figured it was her largesse, more than her presence, that was wanted at the party; so she stayed away as if to outsmart the plotters (as she typed them, in her mind's eye). But as it developed, she was cutting off her nose to spite her face, because in the long run she spoiled a friendship and created a headache for herself, all of which she could have prevented simply by being mimimally generous in the first place.

As for your dissent in the case of C.D., obviously you missed the point. It is one thing for parents to take pleasure (as you do) in giving generously to married children, as the parents see fit. But it is quite another thing for the grown married children to literally demand a substantial gratuity from parents, on the theory that parents owe children a cash refund on schooling the children are obliged to earn for themselves.

What these firm-minded parents gave their son, when money wasn't available, was an example of self-reliant "git-up-and-git," plus encouragement and open-handed permission to strike out on his own and make the most of his opportunities to scale the heights of scholarship. It was his character patterned on theirs, his vision caught from theirs, I would suppose, that has helped him win scholarships and capture degrees. Meanwhile they've been progressing too, from "scratch" in the 1930s to a five figure income in the 1960s. But their laterday prosperity doesn't mean they owe him a lump sum back payment in apology for financial aid they couldn't give him years ago. The very idea is preposterous.

Garment Club Achievement Day Held At Morell

Achievement Day for Morell 4-H Garment Clubs was held at Elementary School with a large number of parents and visitors present.

Sewing and knitting in display was completed by members of first, second, third and fourth year classes under the leadership of Mrs. Emmett MacDonald and Mrs. Joe Rooney.

Miss Theresa MacLeod, director of Women's Institutes and 4-H Garment Clubs assisted by Miss S. Shaw, judged the work and awarded the certificates, and congratulated the leaders and members of each class in the excellent quality of work accomplished during year by the four clubs. She emphasized the more important points of 4-H work and advised the girls to be ever faithful to their pledge and motto. Miss MacLeod also explained how the members could take part in the new phase of 4-H work — The Freedom from Hunger Program.

During the afternoon garments such as skirts, dresses, and blouses were modelled by the girls of 5th year— whose achievement day was held earlier— also 3rd and 4th year members.

CLAIM BOAT RECORD

HALIFAX (CP) — The Newfoundland delegation to the national Junior Chamber of Commerce convention here claimed a boat carrying, dragging, pushing and hauling record this week after they hauled a rowboat five miles. The Corner Brook and St. John's Jaycees are also considering an altitude record claim because they carried the boat over the Citadel Hill during the haul from the Halifax Forum to the Nova Scotian Hotel.
