PARLIAMENT SUMMONED!

Special Despatch to Examiner.

OTTAWA, Nov. 9.

The Dominion Parliament has been summoned to meet for the despatch of business on Thursday, the 9th of December next.

LATEST NEWS FROM DUBLIN.

DUBLIN, Nov. 7.

The feeling among Orangemen against the League is increasing. Forty lodges, comprising 5,000 persons, attended the meeting yesterday at the Portadown Land Reform demonstrations, which will be counter to Parnell's agitation, are promised at several places next week. The Landlords' movement against the League is also increasing. No specially serious outrages are reported this week. One man was shot at in mistake in Connemara. There are decided attempts to reduce the great grazing farmers to the same condition of public hostility to the landlords as the tenant farmers now evince. The London Standard's announcement that the Channel Squadron has been ordered to the West Coast of Ireland, is believed to be true. Instead of the Government sending ironclads to overawe the people who shoot behind stone walls, the public would be better pleased with an ostentatious increase of troops. The Cabinet is considered much too placid. Sir Stafford Northcote has offered the assistance of his party for the maintenance of law and order. At various places in England yesterday Parnell was burned in effigy as Guy Fawkes. The League's new manifesto is regarded as the most bombastic production that has emanated from that body. It tends to further alienate those who usually favor Irish claims. Neither does Parnell's conduct strengthen his case; while his colleagues and the League talk more violently, his language has moderated into whining grievances that the police have dogged his footsteps.

In the course of his speech at Cardonagh, Donegal, Mr. Dillon, M. P., said:—"What was it that the National Land League called upon the people to do? Did they call upon them to commit murder or assassination or to rob the landlords of the land? No. They wished to secure to the farmers the possession of their farms and to protect them against the unjust raising of their rents at all. The programme of the Land League was a very simple one. First, they wished to place it within the power of every farmer in Ireland, to be Protestant, Catholic or Presbyterian, to buy his farm at a reasonable price, and to be the owner of it for evermore. Secondly, that until they succeeded in bringing about that great change they wished to impress the necessity of banding together to put a stop to rack-renting, eviction and landlord oppression. The landlords of Ireland are now very tame and quiet, and they are endeavoring to show through the public press and other means that they were never guilty of oppression. That was of itself a great change that had come over the landlords, and to the National Land League must be accorded the credit of lowering their tone and getting them to draw in their horns. He would relate to them two or three cases to illustrate the oppression of the landlords. The first case was that of a farmer in the county of Tipperary who held a farm for which he paid between £200 and £300 a year of rent. It was the rule on the estate that no farmer was allowed to keep a goat. Well, this farmer had a child who was sick, and the doctor ordered as a remedy goat's milk. The farmer bought a goat and brought it home; but when he wrote to the agent of the landlord and stated the circumstance under which the goat was purchased, and expressed the hope that the rule would be relaxed in this particular case, what was the consequence? The agent came down and shot the goat in the farmer's own yard. If they did not call that oppression he did not know what was meant by the term. Another case was that of a poor family who had consumed all their winter fuel. They had not as much left as would boil a kettleful of water, and they cut a few branches of two old ash trees near to their little dwelling. What was done then by the landlord for this act? One pound a year was added to their rent. It was the practice and rule of certain landlords in the south—he did not know if the same rule was applied in the north—that when the son of a widow married, and wished to be entered upon the rent-roll, to add half a crown an acre to the rent of the farm. He (Mr. Dillon) thought it would be more reasonable to reduce the rent 2s. 6d. an acre when married, as it was not to be supposed that a man's expenses were lessened by his marrying. What the National Land League wanted was to enable the farmers to set at defiance the rules of the agents."

MR. PARNELL INTERVIEWED. After the service of the summons on Mr. Parnell, the following conversation took place between the latter and the New York Herald correspondent, who said:—"So, Mr. Parnell, the Government has really begun proceedings against you."

"Yes," replied the agitator, "this morning I received a subpoena from her British Majesty's Attorney-General commanding me to appear in the Court of Queen's Bench and answer a charge of conspiracy. I was served with the copy of a large indictment, containing nineteen counts, and reciting a number of ridiculous accusations, framed with a view to damage the Land League agitation in the eyes of the outside world, which is naturally ignorant of the real condition of the Irish people. The indictment would be a ridiculous document were it not a malicious one. It shows clearly that no English Government can be trusted to deal honestly or truthfully with any important Irish question. These prosecutions are in all ways illustrative of the difficulty which besets every English Government in its endeavours to govern Ireland. This attempt is in itself anomalous, because it is an attempt to adapt a constitutional system of government to a purpose for which it was never intended.

A CONSTITUTIONAL SYSTEM OF GOVERNMENT implies that the government shall be carried on with the consent of the governed, and that the members of the Ministry shall hold their office because they represent the feelings and wishes of at least the majority of the community. Hence it also follows that this majority know something, or think they know something, of the conditions under which they live, of their own wants and requirements, and of the changes or reforms which they desire to see effected. If the Ministry fail to carry out the wishes of the majority, the result of a general election removes them from power and their places are taken by others more disposed to interpret rightly public opinion. But on the application of the English constitutional system of government to Ireland we have all these conditions wanting, conditions which are essentially necessary to the successful working out of such a system. The government of Ireland is not and never has been carried on with the consent of the governed. The Ministry responsible for this government do not hold their office because they represent the feelings and wishes of the majority of the Irish community. The present Chief Secretary represents an English constituency, and the same remark applies to the rest of the Cabinet. Therefore, it follows that the Ministry who govern Ireland do not owe their position to a majority who know anything of or their wants and requirements, or of the reforms desired by Ireland. Yet absolute ignorance on the part of the governors of the Irish people and those who elect them is not the only obstacle to the working of a constitutional system of government of Ireland. We have in addition to encounter the persistent misrepresentation by the English press of everything which happens here with respect to the present agitation, and the conduct of the Government in reference to it. Here we see a capital exemplification, as I have said, of the impossibility of governing Ireland from England.
