JACK AND HIS GROG

"There is perhaps less drunkenness among the enlisted men of the United States navy than among the men forward of any of the world's big sea fit outs," said a naval officer of experience to the writer. "Drunkenness passed with the old navy. In the days of the old Tuscarora or the Tennessee, as the sailors put it, it was a common enough thing to see about three-quarters of a ship's company returning from shore liberty in such a state that they had to be hoisted over the side in bosun's chairs to save the trouble of carrying them up the gangway. But that sort of thing is no longer endured. Men who go ashore after having remained aboard ship for a considerable period are expected by the officer of the deck to return just a trifle exhilarated, but they never return quite incapable.

"Men who exhibit the slightest indications of being addicted to drink are turned down flatly by the examining surgeons when they present themselves for enlistment nowadays. The surgeons tell me that they can tell from a man's eyes whether he has ever suffered severely from excessive drinking, no matter how long the man may have abstained from drink before seeking enlistment.

"If men addicted to drink do happen to get by the examining surgeon and reveal their weakness by going on 'tears every time they go ashore, the navy gets rid of them by simply 'beaching' them—that is, by putting them on the beach with their bags and hammocks wherever their ship may happen to be in a home port. A man cannot be 'beached' for any cause in a foreign country.

"There are, of course, any number of men in the navy, and rattling fine sailormen, too, who have a natural predilection for drink, and these men the officers keep an eye on for their own good. Sailors are bound to try to smuggle liquor aboard ship. If they drink considerably on their shore liberties, they know that when they return aboard they are in for 'big heads' when they awaken in their hammocks the next morning, and in trying to safely bring a bit of liquor off to the ship they have in mind the taking of 'a hair of the dog' to sort of ease them up when they turn to at 'all hands' the next morning.

"Sometimes they get the liquor safe-

WELL FED FIGHTERS.
Says the London Chronicle: "Admiral Dewey's interruption of the battle of Manila bay to give his crews the opportunity of breaking their fast recalls our own 'glorious 1st of June,' when Earl Howe, before he gave the French such a hammering off Ushant, hove to for an hour before attacking to permit of his men fortifying themselves for the coming fight with a good meal—a pause which caused much conjecture in the minds of the astonished French. It has ever been the Anglo-Saxon way to fight, if possible, on a full stomach. Wellington once said that if ever he wanted an Irish or a Scotch regiment to reach a particular point by a certain hour all he had to do was to promise the former a drink on getting to its destination, the latter its pay, but that the corresponding bait to an English battalion was a good dinner of roast beef."

Many persons cannot take plain cod-liver oil. They cannot digest it. It upsets the stomach. Knowing these things, we have digested the oil in Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites; that is, we have broken it up into little globules, or droplets. We use machinery to do the work of the digestive organs, and you obtain the good effects of the digested oil at once. That is why you can take Scott's Emulsion.

Every enlisted man on a United States man-of-war, except the chief master at arms and the top sergeant of marines, is searched at the gangway upon his return from shore liberty by the gangway corporal of the marine guard, under the inspection of the officer of the deck, for the purpose of ascertaining if he has any liquor concealed about his clothes. The men have picked up some ingenious schemes for smuggling liquor in such a way that the corporal of the guard is fooled. For example, the men on the China station buy long eelskins from the coolies, fill the skins with about a quart of liquor and wind them around their necks beneath the collars of their shirts.

It took the officers on the China station a long while to get on to this scheme. Then the men who felt that they surely needed a drink the next morning after returning from liberty discovered the plan of filling a rubber bag with liquor while ashore and of stowing the bag next to their waistbands. The liquor smugglers, who observed that the searching corporal only passed his hands up and down on the outside of their clothes, then resorted to the plan of tying bottles of liquor with string on the inner side of their legs, beneath their trousers, but any searching corporal knows all about this one nowadays.

"The cox'un of the steam cutter, who makes dozens of trips ashore a day when the cutter is 'running boat,' has to be carefully watched, for he is liable to be tampered with by the men who want liquor pretty badly, and his opportunities for getting liquor aboard are many. Every once in awhile, upon the cutter's return to the ship, it is searched by the officer of the deck, and the latter often finds liquor neatly stowed among the cutter coal, in the cutter bilges or even in the boiler tanks. When this happens, the cox'un of the cutter is in trouble. He gets a big rap off from the men for his liquor smuggling, which accounts for the chances he will take.

"The ship's painter has to be watched too. He is a petty officer, and he has charge of the ship's alcohol, which is chiefly used for the making of shellac to paint the lower decks.

"Some of the sailors like a dose of alcohol mixed with coffee for 'toning' and sobering up purposes, and as the ship's painter is occasionally corruptible and carries the keys of the alcohol tanks there is quite a little drinking of this mixture on some of the ships where old timers predominate. The old flat feet have indeed been known to drink the shellac after it has been prepared for the sake of the alcohol in it, and there is an expression in the navy among the enlisted men, 'If you see a jackie combing his mustache with a marline spike, you know what he's been at,' that is very significant.

"But for all this, as I say, there is an exceedingly small percentage of drinking men in our navy in comparison with similar figures for other big navies. The occasional drinkers in our service, when they return from the beach a bit under the weather, are merely put in the brig overnight and permitted to go to work without punishment the next morning."
