Continued Progress Reported In Health & Welfare Services

By Hon. B. Earle MacDonald, Minister of Health and Welfare for Prince Edward Island

Continued progress has been made during the year 1953 in the safeguarding and betterment of the physical and emotional well-being of our people, and in contributing either financially or in the provision of domiciliary care to those in need in this Province.

The opening of a new Health Centre in Summerside and the establishment of various clinics there has been a great step in the improvement of Public Health and Welfare services to the western part of the Province.

A great step has been taken in the provision of better care for patients suffering from mental diseases by the beginning of construction of a modern active treatment centre.

Marked improvement has also occurred in the provincial situation as far as tuberculosis is concerned. It would appear that the death from this disease has fallen to a new low.

No epidemics of communicable disease occurred during the year, though the usual number of cases of child hood diseases such as measles, mumps, and chicken-pox were reported.

The addition of two Public Health Nurses to the staff helped to relieve the serious shortage of such personnel to some extent.

An increase has occurred in the number of suspected cases of cancer referred to the departmental consultant, and it is apparent that this service is of considerable value particularly to the rural practitioners who do not always have modern diagnostic aids of x-ray and laboratory readily available.

The work of the Provincial Laboratories which combines services related to health with those for the Department of Agriculture and the Attorney General's Department has expanded rapidly through the years.

An improvement in the programme designed to assist in the reduction of tooth decay and the provision of better dental care to children was also noted.

The reporting of births and death has been greatly improved by the setting-up of a new system of registration in which registrars have been appointed at suitable locations throughout the Province.

A beginning has been made on the problem of restaurant sanitation in that most restaurants in the Province have been inspected.

Health and Social Welfare are usually and understandably considered to supplement each other, but in this Province, at least, the welfare services have lagged behind and are still not sufficiently understood except in terms of relief money or pensions.

A comprehensive welfare programme like a good health organization aims not only at treatment of active illness but attempts to educate, to prevent disease, and to provide for all the basic human needs of the individual.

In this Province the whole idea of public assistance and welfare services is quite new. Being a rural area the ups and downs of commerce and industry were slow to affect us, but two world wars and the progress of civilization have tended to make the world smaller and we are no longer remote from outside influences.

In 1945 when the Federal Government passed the Family Allowance legislation, all parties recognized the importance of keeping money in circulation to prevent another great depression.

At the present time welfare operates under a programme of assistance to four special groups, namely - needy mothers, that is mothers with dependent children who have lost the financial support of their husbands due to death, disability or desertion; families where the breadwinner is stricken with tuberculosis; blind pensioners; and older citizens between the ages of 65 and 69 who are unable through sickness or infirmity to provide for their own needs.

The first two types of assistance are entirely provincial measures while the latter are partially paid for by the Government of Canada.

Victims of Head-on Car Crash

A head-on collision five miles north of Kirkland Lake, Ont., killed six people and hospitalized four others with minor injuries. Police believe a car driven by Paul Kuncze, 42, of Little Lake, pulled out to pass another car at the bottom of a steep hill, and in so doing hit a car driven by Kenneth Hager, 20, of Timmins.

Island-Born Musician Dies In Calgary

Solemn requiem mass was sung Dec. 7 in St. Mary's Cathedral, Calgary, Alta., for Mrs. John F. ("Ma") Trainor, 78, well-known Calgary personality and musician who died late Wednesday night in Holy Cross Hospital.

Born in Charlottetown, P. E. I., daughter of the first graduate of Prince of Wales College, Charlottetown, "Ma" Trainor was educated at Notre Dame Academy and taught music for several years at St. Dunstan's University and Mt. St. Bernard, Antigonish, N. S.

Arriving in Calgary in 1912, for many years she led an orchestra and was well-known for entertaining thousands of servicemen during two world wars.

She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. J. D. (Gertrude) McElhargy, Calgary; and two grandsons, Michael, Edmonton, and Terry, Calgary. Her husband, John, predeceased her in 1936.

Burial was in the family plot of the old St. Mary's cemetery.

A Country Garden

growth and a measurement of time, for the exact age of each is known. Sandringham has been lived in and loved. The King passed away peacefully in his apartment overlooking the North Garden which he had created with the inspiration and the loving interest of the Queen.

The church stands in a quiet dignified setting surrounded by the trees of the Park and pleasant lawns and there is a beautiful illustration of the Church in this book of Royal Homes. Also there is shown a double row of Scots pine arching the Church Walk.

It is a great pleasure to see these beautiful photographs of Sandringham (about 30 of them) and to see that many of the plants, shrubs and trees are familiar to us here.

And yours who so long outlived and outlived your part. Holyrood is a royal garden; the gay crowds vary Age after age, the transient ones intrude, Liners and pass; but you remain there, Mary, Pale Queen and mistress still at Holyrood.

HAVE YOU HEARD...

about the retired business tycoon who was preaching the "Ambition" sermon to his wretched grandson... "Why don't you get out and find a job," he demanded. "Get to work! Make something of yourself! Why, when I was your age I was working in a grocery store as a clerk for three dollars a week; and at the end of five years I owned the place!"

Replied the grandson: "You can't do that now-a-days. They have cash registers!"

And speaking of cash registers... there's no finer, more complete, more specialized line of cash registers than the R. C. Allen Line.
