

A Masonic Legend.

Many years ago, in the parish of Carabin, in Galloway, a rude and sequestered district, there were only three Free Masons, the minister, a tailor and a mason. The mason, being desirous to introduce his son to the same mystery, caused a lodge to be called for the purpose at a lonely cottage, where the ceremonies were proceeding when a knock was heard at the door. The mason, whose name was Dun; went to see who it was, and found an old woman, who addressed him as follows: "The masons are met the night?" "Yes."

Triumphant Hospitality.

Returning from one of our excursions I was overtaken by the night, and found my path obstructed by a deep inlet from the river, which being choked with logs and brush, could not be crossed by swimming. Observing a house on the opposite side I called for assistance. A half-naked, ill-looking fellow came down, and after dragging a canoe around from the river with some trouble ferried me over, and I followed him to his habitation, near to which our boat was moored for the night. His cabin was of the meanest kind, consisting of a single apartment constructed of logs, which contained a family of seven or eight souls, and everything seemed to designate him as a new and thrifty settler. After drinking a bowl of milk, which I readily called for by way of excuse by paying him a little more for his trouble, I asked to know his charge for ferrying me over the water, to which he good humoredly replied: "Never take money for helping a traveller on his way."
