In previous elections district returning officers relied on unofficial lists and on their familiarity with local residents to keep tabs on the voters.

A new election act, proclaimed this year, also abolished the "property vote". Councillors and assemblymen have always had equal status in the legislature but under the old system only property owners, clergymen, war veterans and their wives were entitled to vote for councillors. All eligible voters could cast ballots for assemblymen.

Although both parties promised more aid to education, fishing, farming and tourism, the pensions question emerged as the main topic in a quiet campaign. Both pledged to increase the present $75 pension—paid by the federal treasury—to $100 a month with the difference being split between the provincial government and Ottawa. Both also promised more than $100 a month to "needy" pensioners.

Yankee Go Home Calls Heard At U.S. Naval Base In Japan

YOKOSUKA, Japan (AP)—This U.S. naval base city resounded Monday with yells of "Yankee go home." "America get out of Yokosuka" and "go home Snook" as they marched past the main gate of the U.S. base, barricaded by police buses and a wall of Japanese riot police wearing steel helmets with plumed visors and night sticks hanging from their belts.

Most of the demonstrators promised even bigger ones. Most of the demonstrators were brought in from outside this city of 315,000 population by the Socialist and Communist parties.

About 10,000 yelling union members carrying red flags and "go home Snook" placards shook their fists and shouted "America get out of Yokosuka" as they marched past the main gate of the U.S. base, barricaded by police buses and a wall of Japanese riot police wearing steel helmets with plumed visors and night sticks hanging from their belts.

At least eight students were arrested and a number were injured in scuffles with police.

About 200 students had caught police unprepared early in the morning and managed to break past half a dozen U.S. Marine guards at the main gate for a few minutes until they were pushed out by Japanese police.

President Declines Comment

OTTAWA (CP)—CBC President J. Alphonse Ouimet declined Monday to confirm or deny reports that the CBC has refused to renew the annual contracts of 12 to 15 production employees on This Hour Has Seven Days.

to renew their 12-month contracts. All they had been offered were three-month contracts.

Mr. Diefenbaker asked whether such action is likely to settle the dispute between CBC management and producers. Prime Minister Pearson and State Secretary Judy LaMarsh said they knew nothing of the reported firings.

David Lewis (NDP—York South) told the broadcasting committee he wonders whether Mr. Ouimet is being frank and honest with the committee when he promises that Seven Days will be back on the air next fall in the same format.

Man. Businessmen Follow Profit Scent

WINNIPEG (CP)—Manitoba businessmen are following the scent of higher profits back to school in the hope of improving efficiency and management techniques.

The provincial government established the Manitoba Institute of Management after a consultant's report scored the business community for its lack of management skills and added that training had to start at the top if Manitoba was to improve its economy.

The institute is designed to promote application of scientific management techniques, assess management training requirements, assist other educational institutes in improving their courses, sponsor management courses and maintain a business library.

Although it is directed by a board of industrialists, it is receiving financial support from the provincial government.

Work-study projects, for example, are considered a key requirement and the government is committed to financing this phase for two to three years.

An institute spokesman says three courses in work-study have been established. These include a two-day seminar for senior management; an intensive eight-week practitioner course and a supervisory or middle-management course.

FIRMS BENEFIT
 Nine firms sent representatives to the first course, and all reported improvement in work techniques and efficiency.

J. E. Barnett of Price-Acme of Canada Ltd. says tips he picked up during the course resulted in a 19-per-cent reduction in labor time plus a 15-per-cent return on investment. He says men released by the change would be absorbed in other parts of the company operation.

"If you can reduce the amount of effort and still increase production, he says, "then you have achieved the main aim of work study."

Productivity doesn't necessarily follow if one can make employees work harder.

D. I. Waldman of Ideal Brass and Plating said re-arranging of the work area in the plant reduced production time 14 per cent while W. Osaschuk of Bristol Aerospace Ltd. found that manufacturing time of one piece of equipment could be cut 6.2 per cent by relocating the drill press and welding shop.

One of the most dramatic improvements was recorded by Superior Envelopes Ltd. J. W. Gunsten says re-arranging raw materials and gluing the paper in place instead of using clamps improved machine operation by 42 per cent.

GET WORKERS' HELP
 He adds, however, that employees must first be persuaded that they'll benefit before they are willing to co-operate in work study.

"Work study can only be suc-

Motorship Services Improved

The motorship North Gaspe has undergone structural changes and the transportation service to the Magdalen Islands from Pictou, N.S., and the Island this year have been improved.

The North Gaspe will make four trips per week during July and August from Souris, Charlottetown and Pictou. The schedule has been improved by providing trips from Souris during the day Wednesday and Saturday, rather than at night. A balanced service is the aim of the Magdalen Islands Transportation Co. Ltd. by providing a short Souris trip between longer trips from Pictou and Charlottetown.

A schedule has been made to meet all the demands of the service for passengers and automobiles, for perishables and for general cargo, and to attract tourists to the Islands.

The institute has employed three men to develop the work course, study which they describe as a systematic, objective and critical examination of all the factors involved in carrying out an activity.

Each study consists of method study, work measurement and value.

Now that work studies have been launched and supervisory courses planned, the institute plans to hire a full-time director and begin a series of seminars in rural areas to assist businessmen in these communities.

But first "we must find out what the small businessman needs and then determine how to meet these courses," says John Bulman, a director of the institute.
