

Mixed Interests Behind Current Revolt In Sumatra

By CHARLES E. FRANKEL
LONDON (Reuters)—The rebellion on the island of Sumatra in Indonesia is a mixture of army distrust for shaky civilian rule, of provincial resentment against the central government, and of personal antagonisms.

states were reduced to 10 provinces. STRANGE NATION In one respect, it is the world's strangest nation. It is strung out for more than 3,000 miles, lying between Asia and Australia and consists of more than 3,000 islands and islets.

The population is estimated at 80,000,000, the majority Moslems. There are 3,000,000 Christians, 1,000,000 Buddhists and some Hindus. The diversity and the desire for separateness is reflected in the almost continuous revolts somewhere in the islands.

In 1955, no fewer than five rebellions were reported at one time. Dr. Mohammed Hatta, who quit as vice-president on Dec. 1, said that the years of independence for Indonesia have produced only "political and economic anarchy" resulting in "corruption and demoralization."

TOO MANY PARTIES The nation has more than 40 parties. President Achmed Sukarno said in October the multi-party system ought to be abolished.

"I dream of a meeting of all the leaders of the political parties in this country at which they would decide to bury all the present parties," he told a youth meeting. He said it was a mistake to set up political parties when the country was freed from Japanese rule in 1945.

Indonesian party leaders defended the system and one maintained that "we must improve our parties, not liquidate them." Some politicians were worried because Dr. Sukarno's sentiment came after a tour of Communist countries. The president said he had profited more from his tour of the Communist countries than from a previous visit to the United States and Western Europe.

Last month, the cabinet of Premier Ali Sastroamidjojo accused a number of former army officers of several attempts to stage a coup d'etat. There have been a number of charges and countercharges of corruption and bureaucratic inefficiency. The corruption charges have even been levelled at members of the cabinet.

Rivalry and jealousy exist between Sumatra, the republic's richest island, and Java, seat of the central government. Some Sumatra residents said the current revolt was an expression of resentment against the Javanese.

BRISTOL Employment Prospects Good In Canada, Labor Minister Says

OTTAWA (CP) — Future prospects for employment in Canada are good, Labor Minister Gregg said Thursday in a year-end message.

"Excluding the possibility of unusual influences on Canada from other parts of the world," he said, "we can say that the economic outlook on the basis of present developments continues strong and present high levels of employment and income in Canada are likely to continue."

"So far as the over-all investment program is concerned, the large volume of work planned for last year was not entirely achieved. The resulting carryover plus a large volume of anticipated new construction will likely mean another very active year in 1957."

"With the larger numbers of people participating in the labor force, there is not as large a potential manpower pool to draw on. But on the other hand the pressures for more workers in some parts of the labor market may be easier in 1957 than was the case during the remarkable advance in economic activity in the year just past."

While the general employment outlook is good, Mr. Gregg said, seasonal unemployment during the cold weather period. He urged all Canadians to support winter employment campaigns by having as much work as possible done during these months.

Reviewing 1956, he said that for most Canadians it was a year of unequalled prosperity. Production and income expanded at record rates on the aggregate, and per capita income rose substantially.

"There were plenty of job opportunities in most parts of the country throughout much of the year and working conditions generally continued to improve."

Mr. Gregg said the movement of workers from agriculture into other types of employment during the year was estimated at about 80,000—about twice the average for the previous 10 years.

As a result, farmers in many parts of the country experienced severe difficulties in getting enough help. Further difficulty was caused by a drop in the number of experienced farm workers entering as immigrants.

See Prospects Excellent For Good Business Year In U. S.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Business in the United States may expand at a slower rate in 1957, Commerce Secretary Sinclair Weeks predicted Thursday, but "barring grave emergency, the economy as a whole should set records."

Calling attention to economic problems ahead, weeks put inflation at the top of the list. Noting that consumer prices rose 2 1/2 per cent from November, 1955, to November, 1956, he said: "Government, business, labor and consumer all have a responsibility in fostering healthy growth and in avoiding attitudes encouraging an inflationary boom or other excesses."

The U.S. output in the last year, he said, totaled $412,000,000,000 in value, a rise of about $21,000,000,000 or more than five per cent compared with 1955.

RECORD INVESTMENT Business confidence in the future was reflected in record-breaking investment in new plants and equipment, he said, to a total more than one-fifth higher than the 1955 outlays.

Personal income climbed to a total of $325,000,000,000 for the year, six per cent above 1955, while wages and salaries were seven per cent higher.

There were 2,000,000 more job holders than in the previous year, with employment averaging 65,000,000 during the year. Employment in manufacturing did not advance, however, and in July was lowered by the steel strike.

While the advance of the economy may be slower next year, he said, Americans should enjoy higher rates of employment income and output in all 12 months of 1957 than in the year which is closing.

"Prosperity is widely shared," the commerce secretary said. "Confidence is strong. People are earning more and spending more. Capital investment is at a high level."
