Legion Team Plays Steady

The Junior Legion baseball team played errorless ball throughout the full seven innings against the BCAF on Tuesday night. Up to this time, it was their hitting that impressed onlookers, with their hitting rather spotty. There were no examples of what he called "fielding gems" but there was good, steady defensive work all the way, with one or two wild pitches and passed balls that were slightly off otherwise stainless performance. The games so far seem to be a bit, however, and this is particularly objectionable these cold June evenings. There doesn't seem to be enough runs between innings, and some slow motion at other times too. If 20 seconds could be saved between each half inning that would mean about seven minutes in a game, and we can be sure you those last seven minutes are the coldest for spectators, to say nothing of the fact that some fans would like to get back home to see their favorite television programs. We never hear umpires exhorting the players to get a move on anymore.

Don't Help Situation

Disputes don't help the situation, and we have seen that either. We don't think for a minute umpires are deliberately favoring any team but a little home work on the rules and regulations would probably pay dividends. On the other hand, continuous bawling about balls and strikes could be left out of the act with profit. The crowds are small so far, but warmer weather might boost attendance. Let's hope so.

Credit Where It Is Due

Now let's give a little credit where credit is due. Leo Shields working at the P.E.I. Bag Co. has been supplying the ball tappers with bases for some time now. We've been working on the bags would do without Leo's handiwork. Leo has been a fine athlete himself. He was a better than average defenceman in hockey in the days of the old Crystal rink, and he still does a pretty capable job as skip of a curling rink. Thanks, Leo, for your continuing interest and much needed help in the furtherance of sport at Queen Elizabeth Park.

Kelly Is Likely To Feel At Home

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Editor
Red Kelly, a soft-spoken, retiring person, probably will feel right at home when he takes his seat in the House of Commons later this year. "He'll have no trouble getting acclimated," says Bucko McDonald. "Being a hockey player gives you a wonderful advantage in Parliament," says Howie Meeker. Both of these chaps should know. Bucko spent 12 years as an MP — from 1945 until he retired in 1957 — following a big league hockey career with Toronto Maple Leafs where he built a reputation as a hard-hitting defenceman. Meeker spent four years in the House while still playing with the Leafs. Now Kelly, a 13-year National Hockey League veteran, will try to mix politics with hockey.

The nitfy, play-making centre with the Leafs won the York West riding as a Liberal in the June 18 federal election and since then people have been aiming well-meaning advice at him. "Mps ARE FRIENDLY" "It certainly doesn't want to say whether he can mix politics and hockey," McDonald said from his Sandridge, Ont., home. "I never had to do it, so I wouldn't know. I went into politics after my hockey days were over."

"One thing is pretty certain though: He'll go along fine in the House. Politicians follow hockey just as any other persons do and Red probably will find that fellows from both sides of the house will talk to him. They were nice to me, regardless what side of the House they were on."

Bucko was first elected as a Liberal in the Parry Sound constituency in 1945, was re-elected for Parry Sound - Muskoka in 1949 and again in 1953. He now is director of hockey in his home town and coaches the intermediate team.

Meeker, sports editor of a radio and television station in St. John's, Nfld., represented Waterloo South as a Progressive Conservative from 1959 to 1967. As an MP he also played left wing for the Leafs.

"Wonderful in" "His can't do justice to either job."

"I never got in top condition as a hockey player, wasn't able to spend enough time in the gym to do the work of the rink, and neglected my family," he told reporters in St. John's. "Red could do it for a year, but I expect he will have 25 personal problems a week from his district which he will have to look after and which will require a lot of leg work."

But, added Meeker, who later coached the Leafs, playing hockey was a "wonderful in" to a politician.

"After his game, a cabinet minister would look over at me, then come over and say 'you could beat the Rocket' (Maurice Richard) but just kidding and spend a few minutes reviewing the game."

Meeker was on the opposition side of the house, just as Kelly now is. Meeker found that "all the cabinet ministers want to talk to you, which gives you an ad-

Little-Known Briton Ousts U.S. Star Chuck McKinley

WIMBLEDON, England (CP) Mike Han, a little known English schoolmaster, eliminated last year's Wimbledon finalist, Chuck McKinley of the United States, in the men's singles of the All-England tennis championships Wednesday. McKinley, who was the top-seeded American in the men's singles with a fifth-place rating, bowed to the Briton 6-3, 6-2, 6-2. Hann is ranked seventh among British players but was unseeded in the tournament. The 23-year-old Briton, former Cambridge University captain, is on special leave from his schoolmaster's job. McKinley was the only one of the seeded men to fall to advance to the third round. The defeat of the 23-year-old McKinley placed American hopes for victory on the men's side on the shoulders of McKinley's doubles partner Dennis Ralston and Whitney Reed, top-ranked in the United States. Ralston advanced with a 6-4, 6-3, 6-2 victory over Sergei Lebedev of Russia and Reed edged past F. D. MacMillan of South Africa, 8-6, 4-6, 6-2, 6-4. Top-seeded Rod Laver of Australia breezed into the third round with a 6-3, 6-2, 6-2 win over Tony Pickard of Britain. But second-seeded Roy Emerson of Australia, the U.S. champion, had to come from behind to top West German Davis Cupper Wilhelm Bungert 13-15, 4-6, 6-3, 6-0, 6-4. Third-seeded Neale Fraser beat fellow Australian Geoff Pares 6-0, 6-3, 6-4. Manuel Santana of Spain, seeded sixth, ended Russia's threat with a 6-2, 6-3, 6-4 win over Tomas Lejus. Dariene Hard of the United States, second seeded in the women's section, did not play Wednesday. But Mrs. Karen Hantze Susman of the U.S., seeded eighth, moved into the third round by defeating Pat Hird of Britain, 6-4, 6-4. Other women's seeds advancing included third-seeded Maria Bueno of Brazil who beat Eda Buding of West Germany, 6-4, 4-6, 6-3, and fourth-seeded Renee Schuurman of South Africa who topped Mrs. V. A. Roberts of Britain, 6-2, 6-2.

Yanks Blast Twins 7-3; L. A. Angels Keeping Pace

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

New York Yankees are starting to make the rumbling sounds of a plucky pennant-conscious team. Using the New York trade mark of old, the big inning, they crupped for four runs in the second inning and pulled to a 6-1 lead by the end of the third and scored a 7-3 win over Minnesota Twins Wednesday afternoon at New York.

The victory, paired with Cleveland's 4-4 loss at the hands of Detroit Tigers, pulled the Yanks to within two games of the Tribe, and only a game back of Minnesota.

Even so, the surprising Los Angeles Angels kept pace with the Yanks, downing Boston 3-0 to remain in a tie with New York in third place in the American League race.

MARIS HITS NO. 13
At Detroit, Paul Foytack Roger Maris' 13th home run and a homer and a two-run single by shortstop Tom Tresh were the big blows for the home club.

The Yankees jumped on left-hander Jim Kaat for six of their runs and eight hits, before Ted Sadowski relieved him in the third. Kaat is now 8-5 on the year.

Ralph Terry, who ran his record to 9-7, served his 20th home run of the year, in the seventh, to Dan Mincher.

Mickey Mantle, in right field for the Yanks, hit a single in five trips. At Detroit, Paul Foytack stopped Cleveland on six hits, but four of the hits came in the second when the Tigers scored twice. Two more hits came in the sixth when Detroit picked up its fourth run.

The loss went to 11 - game winner Dick Donovan, whose wild throw permitted Detroit to score its first run in the first inning.

craft panic in Salem, Mass., 20 women were hanged as witches in 1692.

At Boston, Don Lee, with ninth inning help from Cha-Cha Cox's feedboxon child Chance, stifled the Red Sox on five hits. The Angels scored twice in the fifth inning and added their final run in the eighth without benefit of a hit. Billy Moran walked as the first batter to face reliever Arnold Earley, who was taking over for starter Ike Delock. Frank Malone threw wild to first base on Leon Wagner's ground ball and runners were on second and third. Lee Thomas brought in Moran with a sacrifice fly to left field.

In the National League at Chicago, Larry Jackson yielded just four singles—one an infield scratch and another a wind blown pop fly — as he handed the Cubs their ninth shutout loss of the season in pitching St. Louis Cardinals to a 4-0 victory in the first game of a doubleheader.

Art MacKenzie, one of the province's top golfers and a member of last year's Willingdon Cup team, scored a blistering 66 at Charlottetown Golf Course on Tuesday evening. Art, who took a gigantic lead in the N.E.P.E.I. sectional tournament last Sunday at Summerside, was in rare form as he beat par Tuesday by six strokes. He had seven birdies, one bogey and the remaining holes were done in par.

Playing with Art at the time was his brother Merlin. Bob Glazey and Ed Miller.
