Special Services At Central Bedeque United Church

The first of a series of services of Christian witness was held in Central Bedeque United Church last evening under the auspices of the East Prince Ministerial Association.

The service was conducted by the Rev. K. Sullivan, Rev. C. A. Hicks led the responsive reading, Rev. R. L. Bacon offered prayer, and Rev. L. M. Breakenridge read the New Testament lesson.

A powerful sermon on the subject of "Hell" was preached by the Rev. S. J. Armstrong, who said that real Hell was absence from God, and man made his own Hell by ignoring God's laws. The clergy of the Association formed the choir, assisted by members of the Bedeque United Church Choir.

Service tonight will be held in the Cavendish Baptist Church at 8.30, where the speaker will be Rev. L. M. Breakenridge of the Summerside Church of Christ.

retreating along a wide front before the onslaught of the Russian-trained North Koreans.

Apparently the North Koreans were trying for a quick knockout before the arrival of the promised American weapons.

Gen. Chai Ung Jun, commanding the Communist invaders, broadcast a demand for surrender of the American-trained southern army.

At Seoul President Syngman Rhee blamed the sudden deadly peril of his American-sponsored republic on "too little and too late" United States military aid.

Other quarters attributed the South Korean plight to bad morale in high places in the southern army and to the startling collapse of two defense divisions on the main road to Seoul.

The sharp turn in the fortunes of war came Monday night after the defence had appeared to be doing better than holding its own with a general counter-attack.

Then two divisions broke under Red artillery fire a dozen miles north of Seoul, and the invaders raced ahead.

Reds Demand Surrender Gen. Chai Ung Jun, commanding the Soviet-trained invaders who crashed into South Korea Sunday morning, personally broadcast a demand for surrender of the American-trained southern army.

There was no direct response then. Although a spokesman for Rhee intimated the resistance would go on, the Southern Government's only alternatives appeared to be flight or capitulation.

After an all-night cabinet session, Clarence Rhee, public information officer and personal spokesman for Rhee, told this correspondent:

"The President is greatly disappointed with American aid; coming as late as it has, it is very difficult to save anything. We have nothing to stop those tanks."

"Our soldiers are very brave. They sacrifice themselves to attack the tanks. The President wants me to tell you to disseminate these facts through the Associated Press to the United States public."

"Korea is very hard up because aid was slow in coming. It is too little and too late."

Reports credited by the American military advisory group had placed the Red tank columns within nine miles north more than five hours earlier. Then later advice put the invaders on the very outskirts of the sprawling capital.

The South Korean army, 100,000 men strong and equipped with American weapons, has no tanks, but has bazookas and other anti-tank devices.

Planes Arrive Too Late The United States Government on Sunday ordered Gen. MacArthur to send military supplies to South Korea from Japan.

Rhee said MacArthur's dispatch of 10 fighter planes would have been a help earlier, "but our pilots must get acquainted with the planes to fly them effectively and we need them and lots more now."

Rhee reported at the time of his statement that on the western front the Southern army was moving up toward Kaesong and the Northern invaders were retreating. The city, 40 miles northwest of Seoul, was the first important point to fall when the estimated 75,000 Soviet-trained planes arrived. The United States Government on Sunday ordered Gen. MacArthur to send military supplies to South Korea from Japan.

2. Canada and the United States have decided to abandon peace-time operation of a chain of "loran" or long-range radio navigation stations in the far north because poor radio conditions made the tremendous expense unjustifiable.

In turn, the Minister was told by Solon Low, Social Credit leader, that the Government should tell Parliament "whatever it needs" to finance adequate preparedness and "we'll support" it.

By Howard Green (PC-Vancouver-Quadra) that Korea could be the start of a new world war in which Canada would suffer most of all and that the Government was putting too much faith in the Atlantic Pact and paying too little attention to the Pacific. He called for more co-operation with Australia and New Zealand.

3. By George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, that Russia's authority, advice and aid is behind the Korean aggression and that Canada should be given information "so that we may know what our position actually is in this very real world of today."

United Church Group In Korea TORONTO, June 26 (CP)—Five Canadians, members of the Canadian Mission of the United Church of Canada, are in the thick of the battle being waged in Korea.

Rev. D. H. Gallagher, an executive director of the Overseas Mission Branch of the United Church of Canada, said today that Dr. E. J. O. Fraser, secretary of the United Church of Canada Mission in Seoul, his wife and four other missionaries have not been heard from since the outbreak of war Sunday.

The four others are: Dr. Florence Murray, (7 Quinpool Road), Halifax, N. S.; Miss Ada Sandell, R.N., Magog, Que.; Beulah Bourne, R.N., Somerset, Man.; and Annetta Rose, Urbania, N. S., an educational missionary at Ewha University, Seoul.

Mr. Gallagher said: "We know they will stay until the last minute even if the bombs start falling."

Red troops invaded Sunday. Rhee then said that the defence was doing well elsewhere—except before Seoul, the most vital spot of all.

When the Northern Reds made their surprise assault all along the 38th parallel at dawn Sunday, the southern forces staggered back.

Then the defence rallied for a counter-attack and even counter-invaded the northern border at one point.

By Monday night, however, the counter-attack had collapsed in the face of persistent tank-led and artillery-backed pushes of the northerners.

The northern mobile column pierced through two full counter-attacking southern infantry divisions—20,000 men—at Uijongbu. That town, 12 miles north of Seoul, was the pivotal point. It fell.

By Tuesday morning the northern column, of undetermined size, had reached Seoul's outskirts with little or no resistance for the last dozen miles.

Americans Annoyed The attitude of American advisers to the southern army was described as one of anger and disgust over the collapse and utter confusion of the division at Uijongbu when it came under heavy northern artillery fire.

An authoritative source which cannot be identified said depleted morale in the highest places within the South Korean army caused uncertainty about the possibility of the last-ditch defence which Rhee so many times had said would be made if a crisis came.

Public morale, in contrast, was excellent, even under the strafing guns of northern fighter planes, Russian-made Yaks. These planes, although only three in number, strafed Seoul at will, Monday night. The city was blacked out but wide awake.

One plane dropped pamphlets, but police gathered them up and forbade pedestrians reading them.
