

Fraudulent Acts Charged In Municipal Winter Jobs

OTTAWA (CP) — Fraudulent and irregular practices have been going on in the municipal winter works incentive program, Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson's report to Parliament shows.

The report, tabled in the Commons, cites as examples longer hours than were worked, claims for federal subsidies for wages at rates higher than those paid, additions of fictitious employees to payrolls and inclusion of municipal employees engaged on jobs other than winter works.

The report says the federal government paid out $136,741,000 to March 31, 1965, on the program. The federal government pays half the payroll costs, and in some cases 60 per cent, on projects which might not normally be undertaken in the winter. An aim of the program is to provide winter work for seasonally-unemployed persons.

The report also says Saskatchewan and Prince Edward Island make little more than an arithmetic check of claims submitted by municipalities or contractors.

"In these cases there is reason to doubt whether all charges are legitimate and whether the conditions of the (winter works) agreements have been met."

WON'T ALLOW PROBE

Furthermore, says the report, although Quebec agreed to the system of auditing, it was reluctant to permit federal auditors to examine municipal records.

As a result, we are not examining the records of municipalities in this province.

The report says the program's effectiveness to help winter unemployment is lowered. More specific spelling-out of terms of winter works agreements is needed. Among the other examples of questionable practices, it listed:

1. Regular or permanent municipal employees being used on projects without replacing them in their old jobs by unemployed, as required by the agreements.
2. Inclusion of the wages of supervisors, technicians, engineers and sometimes principals of the contracting firm, in claims for federal subsidies on labor costs. Few could be considered looking for work and therefore little of this part of the subsidy went to help the unemployed.
3. A tendency by municipalities to undertake "make-work" with high labor content projects "merely to provide work for its residents."
4. Levying an assessment on each worker's wages to help finance the municipal share of the costs.
