HAPPENINGS

Through the kindness of Mr. David Bethune a most interesting photograph of the interior of the Kirk of many years ago has been presented to the church. It shows the choir loft set up above the pulpit on the north wall of the church, the congregation's seating arrangement then in vogue, and the presence of not a few doors and windows that have since disappeared. This is a most valuable acquisition for the archives of the Kirk of St. James.

Mrs. Walter Mackenzie leaves Wednesday morning for Calgary, Alberta, where the immediate members of her family reside. Mrs. Mackenzie has many relatives and friends in this province who very much regret her departure. She has been staying for the past month with her late husband's aunt, Mrs. J. L. Lochart, Upper Hillsboro Street.

Mr. and Mrs. William Michael entertained recently at a large buffet supper party at their residence, Goodwill Avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Ward, of Charlottetown, and Mr. and Mrs. John Lapointe, Timmins, Ontario, were guests at dinner Sunday evening at the Queen Hotel.

Miss Dorothy Williams, who has an excellent position with Industrial Acceptance, Toronto, will be remembered by many friends in Charlottetown. Miss Williams attended school here and later was at Mr. Allison. She is a niece of the late Mr. W.H.V. Dunbar.

In addition to her regular position, Miss Williams had the pleasure this past year to type the manuscript for the articles appearing in Mavair magazine on the life of the late Luigi von Kunits.

Mrs. Aida Campbell, the writer, is a daughter of Mr. von Kunits and she and Miss Williams are personal friends.

Luigi von Kunits was the founder of the Toronto Symphony. He was born and dedicated in Austria. He was a child prodigy on the violin and his first appearance on the North American continent was as violinist with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. While assistant conductor of the Pittsburgh Orchestra, he met and married Harriet Jane Gittings, Mrs. Campbell's mother. In 1922 he came to Toronto. In the ensuing decade he formed the T.S.O. Luigi von Kunits made a great contribution to the Musical Life of a young nation, when music

James & A Neighbor Comment On Live Stock

"I haven't quite decided whether or not to buy up a few feeders this fall," Mr. C. from the house on the opposite Alderlea, commented to James, when the two visited together this evening.

"There's not much margin between the buying and the selling as prices keep nosing," James offered, "not enough to pay a man for his work."

"No," Mr. C. smiled "at the same time the work they would make would help to ease the winter away. And besides I like to take care of stock. It's nice to see them gain and do well."

"I do too," James agreed. "As a matter of fact, there's no prettier sight to my mind than a bunch of sleek fat cattle—or a penful of fat hogs. I always feel a little lost when at last they must go."

"Got many hogs fattening?" Mr. C. queried.

"None, at the moment," James replied. "But" his eyes sought the calendar on the wall, "I'm expecting young ones..." The wind blew with force about the chimney and eaves. "I wouldn't doubt" he chuckled wryly "but there'll be some this very night."

"The wind's high—but it's a warm one," Mr. C. said.

"Yes, it's not cold. No frost. They'll have that in their favor. But I'm thinking some of the litters will be bound to run into weather that is cold."

"We have to take what comes," Mr. C. observed. "Are all the cattle stabled?"

"A few of the young ones are on range yet, but most of the herd we stable overnight. There'll be a roundup one of these times. I expect an exciting one. I thought James smiled at the prospect of bringing in the summer's free youngsters to stables."

"If there's any preparations against this eventually made today, 'Outpost' stalls and sheds were cleaned and partitions arranged to take care of any overflow of stables on that day. The prospect of 'that last piece' postponed because of it."

"And today because of Novem-
