Mr. Farmer has been mentioned as a possible candidate for the position of attorney-general, while a change in Mr. Matheson's portfolio has been rumored.

BRITISH TERMS REPORTS ABSURD

"Another example of the absurdity of these reports is the reference to former French premier, Herriot and Laval. The Duke met Edouard Herriot on his first visit to France in 1916, and always looked upon him as the benevolent politician and mayor of Lyon. Pierre Laval was his only contact at luncheon given at the British embassy in Paris in 1935 and he was a wicked mischief maker and agitator."

According to Coburg, the King preferred Laval, then foreign minister, "who in spite of everything, was relatively the most reliable."

In London, Margaret Lumsden, 56, British editor-in-chief of captured German foreign policy documents, said there was nothing "obvious or sensational" in the papers released by the British government Thursday.

The British newspapers were divided in their reaction—some defending the ex-king, some denouncing him as a traitor. The reports only showed how stupid the Nazis were.

REPORT

(Continued from page 1) products has not kept pace with the growing ability to produce, the report says.

"But there are also indications that rising costs, together with the appreciation of the exchange rate that took place up to the middle of 1950, led to some deterioration of the competitive position of Canadian industry with unfavorable effects on the expansion of activity."

The report says it is expected that the value of Canada's merchandise exports on the world market will be a strong impetus to Canada's secondary industries "whose development in part is dependent upon the exchange rate" through the improvement of their competitive position.

"It is clearly essential that the evaluation should not be allowed to be swayed by cost and price indexes," the report says.

"With considerable slack in the economy, there is little immediate danger of an excessive rise in costs. When full employment is reached, the issue is likely to become more pressing and the Canadian government is aware of the problems which could arise in some circumstances."

The report says early achievement of a reasonable and "fairly stable" balance on exports and imports should allow the government to remove the important surcharges imposed in June.

"It is in the interests of Canada as well as of the world at large that the import surcharges should be removed as soon as possible."

Mayor Bell Gratified At Surplus For Borden

BORDEN — Gilbert C. Bell mayor of the town of Borden, in his new year's review, notes that the town has a big surplus in its history as after all bills were paid, including the purchase price for the alfalfa field, approximately $10,000 remains as surplus over ordinary expenses.

Mayor Bell says "As we approach the end of another year, I look back with satisfaction on the year and I feel that it is my duty to give an account of my stewardship during the current year."

"As our sewerage system was completed about a year ago, except for a few minor additions such as catch basins and part of the outfall, this was completed early in the spring. We then proceeded with the cleaning up of the streets which meant considerable work, but I consider that the chairman and members of the street committee deserve credit for the manner in which this work was carried out."

"Our drainage problem has been almost eliminated due to the catch basins installed in the streets, and in addition a few more added each year until the number required according to the original plans has been realized, then this problem would be eliminated for all time."

"We then had to turn to our financing by floating a bond issue to pay off the debt incurred by installing this system. We were very fortunate in this respect, and the bonds were readily sold through the firm of F. J. Brennan & Co. at a good rate."

"As the co-operative housing project was completed in 1950, it was necessary for us to open up and build a new street in this area; this was completed by the firm of Curbridge & Higgs Ltd. with this street being paved and curbed."

"Another resolution expressed regret at Mr. Kerby being a patient in the hospital."

Speakers included Premier Shaw, Mr. Macnamara and Hon. Andrew MacRae.
