CALIF. MAN DEVELOPS HEN CONTACT LENSES

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (AP) A Santa Rosa man has developed contact lenses for chickens.

He says they eliminate flightiness, feed wasting and cannibalism.

Inventor A. W. Schriner got the idea in 1958 when he noticed that chickens with cataracts were better behaved than others and their production was good.

Instead of lenses to help chickens see better, Schriner hit upon red plastic to distort their vision. The contacts are fitted to the chicken at six to eight weeks of age and can be left on permanently, Schriner says.

Since everything the chicken sees is red, bleeding injuries do not attract it and cannibalism is prevented, Schriner says.

Schriner made these observations after several months of experimentation with contacts for chickens:

1. They prevent establishment of a pecking order and new birds can be added to a flock without starting a fight.

2. They reduce emotional stresses and egg breakage.

3. They stop chickens from picking over their feed and wasting it.

Schriner sees a rose-colored future for the contact lenses

Turkeys, he notes are cannibalistic and panic easily. When pigs are crowded together they fight and bite each other's tails. And cattle frequently fight in feed pens, particularly when newcomers are introduced.

He's working on designs for these and other animals.

Federal-Provincial Taxes Interests Tax Foundation

By GREG MacDONALD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Whatever the deficit or tax changes proposed by Finance Minister Gordon in his first budget this week, they will be overshadowed in the long run by his comments on federal-provincial fiscal arrangements, says the Canadian Tax Foundation.

Mr. Gordon will present the annual budget in the Commons Thursday. It will tell Canadians what taxes they will pay and will include any changes proposed by the government in personal and corporation income taxes, sales tax and custom tariffs.

Commenting in its Canadian Tax Journal, the foundation says that in view of Mr. Gordon's short time in office he may save his detailed comments for a federal-provincial conference later in the year.

"Such a conference would seem to be the logical follow-up to Quebec Premier Lesage's demand for a new revenue-sharing deal by next year, two years before the scheduled end of current arrangements.

Mr. Lesage has suggested that the federal abatements now in effect for the major direct taxes be increased as follows:

1. An immediate abatement of 25 per cent in personal income tax instead of the current 16 to 20 per cent on a sliding scale over the five-year period of 1962-1966;

2. An increase in the abatement of corporation income tax to 25 per cent from 22 per cent, and;

3. An increase in the abatement of estate duties to 100 per cent from 50 per cent.

In the past, says the foundation, federal governments have managed to appear to be adopting a take-it-or-leave-it position.

"While the conflicting interests of the provinces may have made this impossible to avoid, the mood of the time requires more concrete provincial participation in the shaping of new arrangements.

"If it were only a question of increasing the provincial revenues through increased abatements, the problem would be relatively simple and would boil down mainly to which level of government should have to make the hard choice between larger deficits and increased taxes.

"But when combined with the question of the future of conditional grants and equalization policies, it becomes an issue of fundamental importance."

The foundation adds that it would be unrealistic to expect unanimity of opinion among the provinces on the way these policies should be developed.

"However, if, prior to the next federal-provincial meeting, the provinces would hammer out a formula among themselves as a basis of discussion with Ottawa, a major step would have been taken toward a solution more acceptable than the current one appears to be."

Opening lead— king of diamonds.

The play of the hand is an orderly process which declarer commences by sizing up his chances as soon as dummy comes down. Some hands more or less play themselves and the procedure is automatic, but others require some serious thinking before the proper line of play is found.

For example, take this deal where South is declarer at six spades. West leads the king of diamonds and the first thing South does is count his losers.

He sees there are none in spades or hearts and that the only tricks he can possibly lose are a diamond and a club. The diamond loser is certain, so the outcome of the hand therefore depends entirely on avoiding a club loser.

Declarer realizes that if the clubs are divided 3-2, he will inevitably make the contract, but he also realizes that if they are divided 4-1 or 5-0, he may go down. He therefore begins to look for ways and means of making the hand even if the clubs are badly divided.

A little thought provides the answer. He draws three rounds of trumps, cashes the king and ace of hearts, and then ruffs a heart. After cashing the ace of clubs, he plays a diamond from his hand. He does not care which opponent wins the trick-he is sure to make the slam.

Let's look at the actual case first. If East wins the diamond, he is forced to return a heart or a diamond, in which case South gets a ruff and discard and makes the hand. If West wins the diamond, he must yield a ruff and discard or else lead a club. If he leads a club, South simply plays low from dummy and is sure to make the rest of the tricks.

The result would be the same if East were the player with the four clubs. The defenders would run into the same dead end, no matter which way they turned.

It pays to plan the play.

Belaunde Wins Peruvian Vote

LIMA (AP) — Fernando Belaunde Terry of the left-leaning Popular Action pary seemed assured of victory in Peru's presidential race.

Unofficial returns from national elections Sunday put him well out front but once again charges of vote fraud threatened to upset Peru's second try in a year to elect a civilian government.

Belaunde was running at a pace easily ahead of the requirement that a candidate must poll one-third plus one of the total votes cast to be declared elected.

Reds Quit Both Bombers, Surface Ships

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Premier Khrushchev told Harold Wilson, visiting British Labor party leader, that Russia has stopped building strategic bombers and surface warships because of their "total vulnerability."

It was understood Khrushchev has withdrawn the Russian offer of two or three annual on-site inspections in Russia to police a full nuclear test ban although Wilson said the possibility of a partial test ban—excluding underground blasts — seemed to "offer more hope of an agreement."

SUGAR PRICE UP

MONTREAL (CP)—Two major Montreal sugar refineries Monday announced increases in the wholesale price of sugar. A third company said it is contemplating a similar increase. One refiner raised the price 15 cents and the other 10 cents, bringing the price to $15.90 a 100-pound bag. This is the first increase since May 23, when the price hit $17.65 a 100-pound bag. Prices have dropped six times since that date, following the trends of the London raw sugar market.
