OLD MR. TOAD HOPS TOO FAST

Be not too slow, nor yet too fast;
 The former rather than the last.
 —Old Mr. Toad.

Old Mr. Toad seldom hurries. He doesn't believe in hurrying unless it is very necessary and he thinks that isn't often. Of course, Old Mr. Toad isn't built for hurrying. Naturally, he isn't the hurrying kind. It takes a great deal to make Old Mr. Toad really hurry.

But he was hurrying now. That doesn't mean that he was going fast. That is, it wasn't fast for anybody but him. Hop, hop, hop, hop, he went through the soft evening dusk toward the edge of Farmer Brown's garden. After a few quick hops he stopped to rest. From the Smiling Pool far across the Green Meadows came the joyous chorus of his tiny cousins, the Tree Frogs called Hylas. They were the first to waken in spring. As he listened, the music bag in his throat swelled out, but he didn't sing. He could sing best in water. How he wish he had reached the Smiling Pool and was adding his sweet voice to the high, clear, piping voices of his small cousins.

Soon he was on his way again, hop, hop, hop, hop. For folks with long legs, folks who could walk fast or run, the distance to the Smiling Pool was not great. But to one who could travel only by short hops, it was a long, long journey. It is much more tiresome to hop than to walk or run. Just try it. You'll soon find it so.

Peter Rabbit, returning from the Old Orchard on the other side of the garden caught up with Old Mr. Toad as he drew near the edge of the Green Meadows.

"Why the hurry?" asked Peter. Old Mr. Toad stopped to rest. Sweet Mistress Moon came out from behind a cloud and smiled down at him. Peter could see in Old Mr. Toad's lovely golden eyes a dreamy look as if his thoughts were far away. He said nothing but moved on again, hop, hop, hop, hop. Peter chuckled. He couldn't help it. Old Mr. Toad trying to hurry did look a little funny.

"I suppose he thinks he is going fast," chuckled Peter. In a single jump he could cover as much ground as Old Mr. Toad could cover in several of his longest hops and do it much more easily. Once more Mr. Toad stopped to rest.

"Watch out," said Peter. "For what?" asked Old Mr. Toad. "For what should I watch out? Has Jimmy Skunk come back this way?" He sounded anxious.

"No," replied Peter. "I left him over in the Old Orchard on his way to the dooryard.

"Perhaps he will meet Bowser the Hound there," said Old Mr. Toad hopefully.

"If he does, Bowser won't bother him. He learned his lesson a long time ago and never has forgotten it," replied Peter.

"What lesson?" asked Old Mr. Toad, preparing to move on.

"The lesson of politeness, especially towards Jimmy Skunk," Peter explained.

Old Mr. Toad wasn't listening. He was on his way again, hop, hop, hop. He could think of nothing but getting down to the Smiling Pool and there singing his love song to Old Mrs. Toad. He wondered if she was there and perhaps worrying because she could neither find nor hear him.

"Don't go too fast," warned Peter. "If you do, you may hop right into trouble." He chuckled softly.

"What trouble?" Old Mr. Toad stopped long enough to ask.

"I don't know," confessed Peter, then added brightly, "unexpected trouble. It is always waiting around

NO-EASY VICTORY

The defense gave South a run for his money in the following hand! West's double of the one-heart opening was unduly shaded, and its only effect was to give South a broad hint about the location of key cards. Such doubles are rare-ly to be commended.

South dealer.
 Both sides vulnerable.

♠ 7 4	♥ 9 8
♦ Q 9 2	♣ 10 7 6 2
♠ 10 8 6	♥ K Q 7 3
♦ 10 6 2	♣ 9 8
♠ K 10 5	♥ 3 7 4
♦ A 8 4	♣ J 10 5 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♥	Dble.	1NT	Pass
3♥	Pass	4♥	Pass

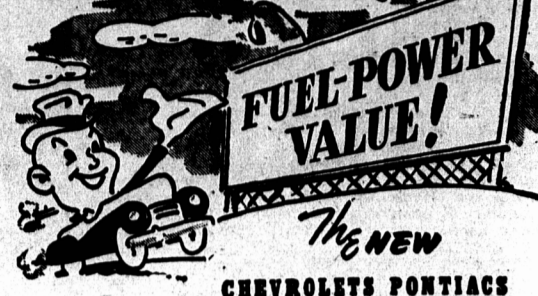

In fairness, however, West did redeem himself to some extent by making an excellent lead — the deuce of trumps. South captured East's nine and led his singleton club. West strongly suspected that this was a singleton, but he nevertheless refused to put in the ace. This was sound defense; if West had taken the trick, South would have had a comparatively easy road to travel, since the diamond queen would always be an entry to dummy.

for everybody. So don't hurry so fast you hop right into it." He chuckled again.

Old Mr. Toad said nothing but moved on, hop, hop, hop, hop. Just then a cloud hid the face of Mistress Moon and for an instant Old Mr. Toad couldn't see what was ahead. He didn't stop. He went right on, hop, hop, hop — right off into trouble.

not have to lose a club trick made the hand much more difficult to develop, and it is doubtful that many players would come through in South's position. The actual dealer, however, conducted the play almost as though he could see the location of every card! He ruffed a low club and led a low diamond toward dummy. West put up the king — it would not have helped him to duck — and exited as best he could with another low heart. South took the trick, went over to the diamond queen and ruffed another club, dropping West's ace. He then cashed the diamond ace and led the diamond eight — and West was fixed. He
