

INVOLVE
ÜPEI
'77
MENT

ident Ron Baker and Fred Von Dreger apart. Not an easy task at the best of times. More so since a firm left hook thrown by Bob Campbell and directed at Fred's jaw occurred earlier in the day. But knowing Fred, I was not suprised at the relative ease with which he danced away from his opponent and continued to upset the more conservative members of the gathering.

I should draw the attention to the fact that pictures were taken during the activities of this infamous night. In fairness to the people involved and also with the desire to avoid any embarrassment, these pictures, including the negatives, may be purchased for a mere $75.00 each. Free enterprise is not dead yet. One particular snapshot was taken of David Morrison (Relious Studies) scaling the roof of the building in which the SixPacks and Sevenups were barricaded. Dr. Morrison, driven by religious fervour, was trying to gain entrance through the chimney. However, the fire place was at that moment burning a healthy fire and he reluctantly changed his mind.

I hope that our revered editor of the SUN will not mutilate this statement to the point that even I don't know what I was talking about. In summary, it was a great weekend and the people who did not attend were the losers. A warm thank you to all who made it work.

Temperance Movement Corrupts All Tersteeg Abducted

Final words of the Involvement weekend were uttered by Prof. Bert Tersteeg on Sunday afternoon, following a rather "loose" Saturday evening.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Having listened to some positive statements by the previous speakers I must confess that last night's events have altered some of my thoughts about the positive aspects of this weekend. I would, on behalf of those delegates not mentioned in this statement, like to take this opportunity to point out some disturbing events which occurred last night.

The leaders of groups 6 and 7, conveniently christened the "SixPack and Sevenups" Prof. Robert Campbell and Gary Webster have proven to be very unreliable characters. Their actions last night have caused me to disassociate myself from them forever. I suggest that the others in the groups mentioned do the same.

After all, if they, in spite of their commitment to the temperance movement, see fit to abduct an innocent member of their group in the middle of the night by lifting him out of bed, mattress and all, then their behavior becomes suspect. Furthermore, those two (so-called) gentlemen managed to inspire a very respectable lady by the name of Mary Ross to become totally irrational and had her jump into bed with the bewildered abductee. To make matters worse, this all happened in a place labeled off-limits to the members of the conference. If involvement was the theme of this gathering, they certainly succeeded in establishing a new meaning of the word. Incidentally, the bare facts of last night's events will be duly printed in the SUN.

I would be amiss if I did not mention, negatively speaking, the behavior of some of the organizers of this conference of involvement. Marion Basha, the dean of women, gave an excellent performance. I have known Marion as a Morrison for quite some time but since she became a Basha she certainly has lived up to her new status. Judging by last night, she loves a good bash.

Jim Griffith, despite his suave manners was seen sneaking towards the cottage in which the spirits were stored with the obvious intent of strenghtning his personal spirits and the spirit of his compatriots. Unfortunately, he ran into an unexposed problem. When opening the door to the hallowed hall, he found the premises occupied by a group of female participants having a spirited, admittedly hushed conversation. Poor Jim beat a hasty retreat and it was noticed that the encounter had a somewhat dampening effect on his initial zeal.

I must not forget to mention the moderating abilities of Frank Ledwell who voluntarily directed a frank and honest exchange of democratic dialogue by cutting everyone short regardless of ones' position. He was particularly brilliant at keeping Pres-

