Election Patronage Charges Are Heard

OTTAWA (CP)—The Commons Privileges and Elections Committee has been asked to investigate a charge of patronage in the hiring of a large number of constables, including one invalid and several women, at polling stations in two constituencies in the 1957 federal elections.

The request for the investigation was made by the House's public accounts committee which Tuesday questioned Auditor-General Watson Sellar about the hirings.

Mr. Sellar's annual report for the 1957-58 fiscal year, under study by the public accounts committee, states that some deputy returning officers in 1957 used their authority "extensively" to appoint constables at polling stations. They are paid $6 for the day's work.

The report says that in one New Brunswick constituency constables were appointed at 183 of 206 polling stations. In one Ontario constituency constables were appointed at 211 of 247 polling stations.

LISTED AS INVALID
"One instance was noted where a constable was listed as an invalid on the list of electors," the report states. "It was also observed that a number of the constables were women."

Richard A. Bell (PC—Carleton) said the extensive use of constables in the two constituencies amounted to "patronage" and was an "abuse" of the Canada Elections Act. On his recommendation the matter was referred to the privileges and elections committee.

Under the Canada Elections Act, a deputy returning officer may appoint a constable to maintain order. However, this authority may not be exercised unless the services of a constable are deemed "absolutely necessary."

The act states that "a constable may be appointed only when there is actual or threatened disorder, or when it is likely that a large number of electors will seek to vote at the same time."

Reds Present 'Alternative'

By JOHN EARLE
GENEVA (Reuters) — Russia Tuesday presented its already-known "alternative" proposals for Berlin to the Big Four foreign ministers' meeting here.

The plan, which would permit token Western and Russian forces in a "demilitarized" free city of West Berlin, was merely a re-statement of proposals set out earlier by Premier Khrushchev in public speeches.

Russia was reported to have been insisting at private talks here on stationing Soviet troops in West Berlin, but Tuesday was brought into the open.

The West is firmly opposed to having any Soviet troops in the city, even as "token" forces.

As another alternative, Foreign Minister Gromyko said "limited contingents of troops of neutral states" could replace American, British and French troops in the city.

THREE HOUR SESSION
The ministers met for three hours in Tuesday's plenary session. As a result of the long session, a private meeting that had been scheduled Tuesday night at the villa of State Secretary Herter was cancelled at Herter's request.

Western officials believe that any progress in the talks will come at the private sessions. The

Longer Hours Ahead In Commons Chamber

OTTAWA (CP)—The Commons Tuesday agreed to begin sitting longer hours June 10 instead of June 3 after the Liberals opposed the earlier start.

The motion of Prime Minister Diefenbaker, adding sittings of 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. on the Wednesday and Thursday schedules and one of 8 to 10 p.m. each Friday, was introduced on the 32nd day of the present session, which began Jan. 15.

The prime minister explained such a motion was usually presented about this time in a session, but the Liberals termed it premature in view of the amount of work still to be done.

Lionel Chevrier of Montreal Laurier, Liberal House Leader, said he cannot see the session ending for at least another six to eight weeks. Much contentious legislation remained to be debated, the end of House committee work was not yet in sight and the spending estimates of virtually all departments had not yet been considered.

Hazen Argue, CCF House

Leader, said his group was prepared to start longer sittings June 3 as the prime minister's original motion proposed. But in order that his motion receive unanimous consent, Mr. Diefenbaker got around the Liberal objection by having the starting date delayed one week.

Mr. Argue said that Parliament's work load is increasing yearly, meaning that an MP's job was becoming more of a full-time one. Therefore, Parliament should get away from jamming its work into five or six consecutive months each year. Some consideration should be given to a staggered type of session which would allow MPs to take their holidays during the summer months, when most Canadians go on vacation.

The Commons now sits 25½ hours a week Monday to Friday. Starting June 10 it will go on a 31½-hour week. In addition to this, numerous House committees meet while the House is not sitting.
