NEW FINA STATION-RESTAURANT OPENS MONDAY AT SOURIS

Prince Edward Island's newest service station is being opened in Souris. In addition to serving the motoring public with Fina's finest gas and oil products the station will feature a restaurant "Hospitality Corner" where customers can get a snack while their vehicle is being serviced. The owner is Joseph Paquet (insert) a well known Souris man. Mr. Paquet has issued an invitation to the general public to come in for a look at the new establishment on opening day.

Labor Movement Views Differ In Canada, U.S.

VANCOUVER (CP)—The labor movements of Canada and the United States have different concepts about the private enterprise systems of their countries.

In the United States labor appears to bolster the economic and political system. In Canada labor wants to change it.

Ironically Canadian unions seeking change sometimes are affiliated with American unions supporting private enterprise.

The differences were outlined in talks by two men at a British Columbia-government sponsored labor-management conference now in progress here.

Dr. A. J. Siegel of Boston, associate professor of economics at the Massachusett's Institute of Technology, said achievements in labor unions resulted in benefits to the economic and political system of the U.S.

He indicated he thought the same thing was true in Canada. But Edward Sims, regional vice-president of the Canadian Labor Congress, made it clear that the Canadian labor attitude is different.

Dr. Siegel said labor achievements have resulted from negotiations between private parties and are, in a sense, private law.

ADDS TO ACCEPTANCE

"The fact that they have been made through private bargaining strengthens basic acceptance by union members of our economic system.

"Indeed, the U.S. has been uniquely fortunate among developed and free-enterprise economies in having an industrial work force and labor movement that accepts this basic political and economic framework and seeks to advance its interests within this framework."

Not so in Canada, said Mr. Sims.

"Although, this may apply in the United States, as far as the labor movement is concerned, this does not necessarily apply to the trade union movement in Canada," he said.

He said the CLC, which represents most of the labor movement in Canada and which joined with the old CCF to form the New Democratic Party, "very definitely supported the principle of economic planning."

"The congress feels that collective bargaining, important as it is for solving those problems which lie in the area of management-labor relations, cannot by itself solve the unemployment problem."

He said economic planning, which would require the use of fiscal and monetary policies as well as the establishment of planning bodies, obviously lie outside the power of collective bargaining.

Armed Forces Upkeep Poses Tough Problem

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — The defence department's chief problem is the rising cost of upkeep of the armed forces and the consequent shrinking amount of money left over for new equipment.

In the current fiscal year, the costs of maintaining and operating the 121,000-member armed forces is $1,158,380,000 and the fund left for new weapons $238,479,000.

This means that only $1 is spent on equipment for every $4.48 spent on paying service-men, providing them with housing, buying gasoline for tanks and planes, and the like.

Because of this tightening straitjacket, the defence department in recent years has been able to tackle only one major equipment program at a time and each can take our or five years. Other needed projects have had to be deferred or cancelled.

MUST BREAK BARRIER

Defence Minister Paul Hellyer, 39, a self-made Toronto business executive, indicated Thursday he will try to break through the financial barrier.

How will he do it?

He dropped only hints before the Commons defence committee — that the expensive frigate program undertaken by the former Conservative government may be scrapped and that an RCAF proposal to acquire more CF-104 low-level jet bombers will be rejected.

He promised decisions within a few weeks on such procurement programs and more decisions on future defence policy early next year.

Mr. Hellyer indicated he's willing to take on powerful interests — the shipbuilders and members of his own Liberal party — to reshape defence policy.

SETUP NOT SIMPLE

His problem, however, goes farther than, say, scrapping the frigate program and putting another costly project or several small ones in its place.

With equipment prices growing, he will have to give himself financial room to manoeuvre in future years.

This may entail some drastic changes in policies which for the last decade have been accepted more or less as untouchable.

Some possible changes are: A healthy manpower cut, spread out over a number of years and accomplished simply by slowing down recruiting; closing of some radar stations; mothballing of the aircraft carrier Bonaventure and its planes; disbandment of an army brigade in Canada; creation of a single service with integrated administration and supply systems.

On the basis of his statement Thursday, Mr. Hellyer appears determined to make over defence policy like no minister since the late Brooke Claxton.
