JANUARY 7, 1886

Sir John on "The Situation."

In the course of his speech on being presented with the freedom and living of the worshipful Turner's Company of London, Sir John McDonald said:

"In my public life I have had to do with many a crisis, but I have had in some small way considerable experience of the sister art of cabinet making—(laughter)—and therefore I think it not altogether inappropriate that you should have held me this great honor beyond and have always felt that the best interests of the Dominion—the best interests of all the provinces composing that Dominion—are involved in the perpetual connection of the Dominion with the mother country, (Cheers.) That has been our opinion, our feeling, and our ardent wish. I remember that when we were a few scattered provinces that feeling was not so unanimous in England as I hope it is now. (Hear, hear.) It was naturally felt that a few struggling provinces might become a source of difficulty and of danger rather than of strength. In the progress of time, in the development of the colonies, and especially so far as Canada is concerned, those scattered provinces have by union become one great Dominion; and we are proud to believe that the English people have recognized that we have become a strength to the empire rather than a source of weakness. (Hear, hear.) By a junction of provinces which now our federation of 3,000,000 of people, we are numerically not a little to the strength of the empire, and I can assure you—if assurance were needed—that the will is not wanted against our people to demonstrate, when a time of danger comes to England, that Canadians will be ready to share that danger, to run the perils of war, to be of warlike difficulty for the sake of perpetuating our connection, and of standing by the dear old Mother Country. (Cheers.) In order to do that we have in a commercial phase to a certain extent discounted that connection. We have ventured to obtain here large sums of money to pledge the credit of the infant Dominion for the sake of constructing that great work to which Sir C. H. Gregory and Mr. Blackstock have alluded. That is a great commercial work, a work of absolute necessity for our binding our different scattered provinces together into one vast whole. We look upon it also as of great value to the mother country, as a great and secure military route. (Hear, hear.) Should war arise, should an eastern crisis supervene, should either by accident or design, the Suez canal be interrupted, and it would most certainly be interrupted in the case of war—for it is a route, a means of communication on which no dependence can be placed by which the Northern Pacific can be reached, from which China and Hong Kong are within striking distance, and in which Australia can be reached, if success in which India can be reached, and to every young man of that age, too, if she chooses to assume the responsibility of being the head of a household, to offer each of them 100 acres of the most fertile land ready for the plough—(hear, hear)—and instead of one wretched cow—(laughter)—each of them can become proprietors of herds of cattle. (Cheers.) Then, again, there is open to every English, Irish or Scotchman who desires to settle in our land various industries in which they can be profitably employed. We have coal fields of unlimited extent, mines of useful minerals, iron, copper, lead; all the metals, in fact, used in our civilization, and at present moment there is a rush from the United States into the Rocky Mountains to the mines of the Province of British Columbia, to seek for the precious metals, gold and silver, which I have no doubt will be found in abundance in the early future. With all these advantages that we can offer, we feel that they would be of comparative little use unless we had the certainty of law and order, of obedience to the law, and of protection to all in the pursuit of their various avocations. (Hear, hear.) That we have got by being connected with the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and I look forward on an early day for a more complete confederation of the Australians, which has already so auspiciously begun. Not very many years will see also a like confederation in South Africa. If we only consider that in case of any nation threatening the mother country, that union means, having in our hands the assurance of continued peace and continuous quiet, and sovereignty of the ocean. (Cheers.)"

Before leaving the Lord Mayor Sir John McDonald was, at the Guildhall Sir John's request introduced to him by the officials of the Turner's Company.

Commenting on the ceremony and Sir John's speech

We can only hope with him, that the work of British Confederation still going on all over the world—though the principle seems to be somewhat at home—will not cease until the mother country, strong in her union with three auxiliary nations, has the assurance of continued peace and the sovereignty of the ocean."

Pronouncing Matches.

A new mania, which bids fair to have as great a run as the spelling matches of a few years ago, has appeared in some sections of the country, and is gradually working its way in this direction. ("It is the pronouncing match.") No doubt the fashion will soon reach this city, and the young people of Charlottetown will be engaged in the careful study on Webster and Worcester. The contests are conducted something like the spelling-matches. Sides are chosen and referees are appointed, who have before them copies of Webster and Worcester unabridged. A word pronounced by either authority is considered correct. The test words, which have previously been chosen, are spelled by some one selected for that purpose, and those entered for the fray pronounce them—or at least they try to. When any one fails he sits down, the word is pronounced correctly and another word is given out to the next person. When any dispute arises it is immediately referred to the referee. If the word is not understood it may be written down on a blackboard, and the contestants may ask to have it defined.

At a recent match in an Ohio town some thirty-five contestants above the average skill and ability in this regard were put down on a list of about 250 words, the most of them in everyday use. Among the words which were missed were dismay, sacerdotal, equable, presume, courtesy, harass, amateur, suffice, voluminous, infantile, oleomargarine, apothecary, "consilium, brooch, Arab, bravado, exhibit, piquant, want, almond, convalescence, comely, exemplary, youths, truths, effusive, blithe, etc.

Opening of Cavendish Hall.

The Cavendish Hall Co. having completed their new Hall, invited the public to witness the opening ceremonies, which took place on the 24th of December. On entering the Hall the first thing we noticed were the portraits of the Queen, the late Prince Consort and the Prince of Wales, hanging on the wall over the platform, while extending across the end of the building, tastefully got up in moss, were the greetings of the season, "A merry Xmas and a Happy New Year," and surmounting the whole was the word "Welcome."

J. C. Clark, Vice-President of the company, occupied the chair; and the exercises of the evening were gone through according to the following programme:

Music by the choir—"My Country 'tis of Thee."

Address by Rev. W. P. Archibald—"On all and Sundry Matters."

Music—"Beautiful Vale."

Humorous Reading by G. R. McNeill—"The Firm is not Over Yet."

Music—"Home on the Hill."

Address by Rev. J. C. Spurr—"On the Uses such a Building Might and Ought to be put to."

Music Solo—"Longfellow's Bridge"—E. C. McKenzie.

Address by Arthur Simpson, Esq.—"Progress in Our Own Time."

Music—"Sing On."

Humorous Reading by the writer—"A Ward's visit to Brigham Young."

The programme being exhausted, the Chairman then called on John Simpson, S. H. Brown, Esq., and Mr. D. Bears, Teacher, all of whom gave short and suitable addresses.

The speakers on the programme all acquitted themselves splendidly. The first speaker, Rev. W. P. Archibald, complimented the address, and he hoped the Hall filled a long felt want, and he said to see a library and reading room in connection with it, and would be ready with a subscription for that purpose.

Rev. J. C. Spurr said the houses of worship were of the first importance; next came the school houses, and after that a hall was a necessity. He dwelt at some length on the power of sacred song, and hoped to see a singing class organized, and temperance and other societies formed.

Arthur Simpson, Esq., contrasted the island in the time of our forefathers with our time, and brought to our notice the great advances that had been made in government education, temperance and general intelligence. He said that formerly only the minister and the schoolmaster were expected to address a meeting like this, but this was all changed, and farmers could now discuss the living questions of the day.

The readings by G. R. McNeill and the writer showed that the audience appreciated humor when it was of a high order.

The closing address was delivered by the Chairman, who briefly reviewed the history of the company, and stated some reasons why a Hall was not built before in Cavendish.

A vote of thanks was then tendered to all who took part in the meeting, and also to the building committee in recognition of their services in the erection of the Hall.

After singing "God Save the Queen," the meeting dispersed, well pleased with the first entertainment provided by the Cavendish Hall Company.

WALTER SIMPSON,
Sec'y Company.

Should Louis Riel be Executed?

This question was debated on the 18th ult., and adjourned till the 4th inst., when it was again debated by the Black Bush Debating Club and Literary Institution.

The subject was opened on the 18th ult., by Mr. John Alfred McDonald, who showed by a few well-chosen words that the arch-rebel and messiah's chief should be executed. Messrs. Joseph Morrison, Joseph Currie and J. J. McPhee also concurred in this opinion and, in argument which could not be refuted by opposite speakers, proved the justification of hanging Riel. The other side was strongly supported by the President McPhee, Joseph A. McCormack and Hugh J. McDonald.

As there were several members who could not attend that night, and the subject not fully discussed, it was adjourned till after the holidays. On the 4th the subject was again brought up, when the following speakers took part: For the execution—John Alfred McDonald, Joseph Morrison, Clement McDonald. Against the execution—Joseph A. McCormack, James McPhee, Wallace McCormack, H. J. McDonald.

The discussion was extremely animated. The Northwest situation was very well discussed, and the large audience frequently expressed their applause. On conclusion the subject was put to the clerk for decision, which was carried in the negative by the small number of two of a majority.

As next night of meeting is literary night the executive committee are getting up a first class programme of essays, readings, songs and recitations for the occasion.

Black Bush, Jan. 5, 1886.

J. S. MORRISON, Secy.

NOTES.

Not the promissory, but facts about WELCOME SOAP, an article that does not contain one particle of the adulterations used to reduce the cost of "Pure Goods," but does possess the value of legitimate Washing Qualities, the demand for which proves the advantage gained by the use of the genuine over Soaps of doubtful character. None should be deceived even by Red and Yellow Wrappers, or any of the imitations of the WELCOME, as a pair of clasped hands is stamped on every bar. Made by CURTIS, DAVIS & Co.
