Zion Y. P. S. Holds Meeting
On Tuesday evening, November 26, Zion Young Peoples Society held their regular weekly meeting.

The devotional period was led by Jim Fletcher and Edgar Ellis. The scripture was taken from Mark 11:22-23 and the theme was "Have Faith in God." Hymns sung were:

"God of mercy, God of grace"
"Pass me not, O gentle Saviour"

The president opened the business meeting with prayer. The suggestion of putting on a play within the society and then to compete against other Presbyterian Young People Societies was brought up.

A discussion on "Who Are Presbyterians?" led by Rev. W. H. Brown followed the business meeting. Members of the panel were Faye Holmes, Judy Miller, Wilbur Lamont and David Mackinnon, speaking on its historical background of our Church.

Relationship of our Church to the Christian Church; Government of our Church; and Society of God, respectively. The members then adjourned to the lower hall for games led by Edgar Ellis.

The singing of "Bless Be The Thee That Binds" closed the meeting to a close.

ST. DUNSTAN'S PLAYERS IN MEDIEVAL COSTUME

Medieval Morality Play Is Presented By SDU Players

Last night at the Collier auditorium, St. Dunstan's University Players presented "Everyman," a medieval morality play. This is thought to be the first occasion on which a play of this type has appeared on an Island stage.

Directed by Mrs. Adrien Arsenault, the play by setting and costume recreates the atmosphere of the 14th century in which it was first produced.

In contrast to the realistic drama of our day, this play is intellectual and abstract. Like all medieval art it is never realistic, anecdotal, or melodramatic, but rather, as the Director points out, "idealistic, universal, and of classical form."

Teasing last night's production in particular, Father Arsenault said:

"Every man is faced with death. He instinctively recoils against it, as human nature is prompted to do. Later, understanding its inevitability, he accepts it, not in a purely humanistic or stoic fashion, as will be the case in the XVIII and XIXth century plays, but as a spiritual act."

To permit the audience to meditate on the beautiful and true things which are being said. The end of the play is a meditation. Even if the XXth century does not accept generally, a Christian society that can react as single-heartedly as did medieval audiences who listened with Christian concepts regarding death, at least death itself remains an experience which none of us may escape, and consequently, as still nowadays, just as acute an individual human problem as it was for men living in the XIIIth century. Everyman, because of its "formal, its anti-emotional style, and because of its approach to a universal problem of mankind, is a great classical play and remains one of the great dramas in the repertoire of modern theatre."

Charlottetown Community Nursing Registry Meets

A general meeting of the Community Nursing Registry was held last evening at the Prince Edward Hospital Nurses' Residence. The first vice-president, Mrs. George Dewar, chaired the meeting.

The membership learned with interest that Mrs. W. E. Mackay and the registrar, Mrs. J. H. Horne, had both resigned their posts. Mrs. Horne has carried the responsibilities of registrar for eight years and has devoted service to be missed greatly by the nurses and hospital.

The secretary, Mrs. Gerald MacIntosh, reported the current Registry membership to be forty-one members.

Guest speaker for the meeting, Mrs. Vernon Bolger spoke on the national conference in nursing held in Ottawa the first week of November. She cited the following recommendations which came out of this meeting:

1. That government at all levels, hospitals, administrators and nursing executives should be advised of and impressed with the need for adequate budgets for the education of nurses.

2. That schools of nursing will need improved facilities and adequately prepared instructors, therefore bursaries for post-basic and post-graduate study should be increased and continued.

3. That the Canadian Nurses Association should conduct a recruitment program for instructors, supervisors and administrators for the nursing profession.

4. That there is need for extensive and continued studies of curriculum content of nurse educational program.

5. That hospital conducted schools of nursing should have a separate budget from the hospital and that there should be close cooperation between the director of nursing service and the director of nursing education to safeguard the quality and quantity of nursing service and nursing education.

6. That in all plans for nursing education, the preparation of nursing assistants be included as an integral part of nursing education programs.

7. That post-basic degree programmes for nursing exist.

8. That in all plans for nursing education, the preparation of nursing assistants be included as an integral part of nursing education programs.

9. That in all plans for nursing education, the preparation of nursing assistants be included as an integral part of nursing education programs.
