Souris Wins Donor Trophy As Island Clinics Fall Short

Just 152 of the expected 210 donors for the 1964 Red Cross blood donor clinic held at the Recreation Centre of RCAF Station Summerside yesterday morning, F.O. Rosalind Alexander was the co-ordinator for this clinic and was assisted by 10 volunteers from various departments on the station.

At Kentville last evening there were 188 donors in attendance at the Legion sponsored clinic and at their home under the chairmanship of Earl Carline. This was 10 per cent over the goal and was the only clinic to reach and exceed its objective.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Kensington, as well as the Women's Institutes of Norborne, Hammonds, Malpeque and Sea View, all shared in providing the refreshments.

A total of 874 donors registered during the four days of clinics in 1964, only 74 per cent of the quota of 1,170 set for the week.

Now that the five series of "Centennial Year" clinics have been completed, Red Cross officials announced last night:

RCAF Bought More Tunics Than Needed

OTTAWA (CP)—The RCAF in 1963 turned up over 12,000 winter tunics for the Canadian Disposal Corporation when it found it had ordered more than it needed.

It was reported that the RCAF had ordered 12,000 tunics (Vancouver East) said Thursday in the Commons defence committee.

Mr. Winch, a member of the Commons public accounts sub-committee which has been investigating the corporation's operations at secret meetings, said the RCAF paid $650 to the Eaton Company for each tunic.

The highest bid received by Crown assets for the tunics was 17 cents each and the bidder later withdrew his tender to too high.

Mr. Winch said it has also been found that the army now has received 12,000 tunics for officers' messes to last 21 years.

He also said $75 for $200,000 worth of spare parts declared surplus when the two RCAF C-119 transport planes were taken out of service last year.

The public accounts committee itself earlier heard evidence that the RCAF had been paid $166,000 for research and development work on the defence production department has any control over requisitioning of equipment by the armed forces.

Better Relations Expected Between Founding People

OTTAWA (CP)—Heath Macpherson, Progressive Conservative MP for Quebec, said Thursday night that over time the majority of Canadians expect new and better relations between French and English Canadians will come from current concern with increasing unity between the two groups.

Rapid and recent social and political changes in Quebec have brought new dimensions and unprecedented seriousness to the frequently uneasy relationship between the two great founding people, he said in a lecture at the University of York at Burlington, Vt.

"Many Canadians in a typical Quebec have difficulty in understanding the current aspirations of their fellow countrymen. This difficulty is often aggravated by the noisy clangor of the extremist who, in every language, sometimes drown the voice of moderation."

But the overwhelming majority of Canadians in all provinces are not extremists and all will wish to arise a new and better relationship, marked by a healthy appreciation of the needs and aspirations of both groups.

"A growing number of Canadians advocate substantial changes in the written portion of our constitution. Many fear that an excessive emphasis on provincial rights seriously undermines the effectiveness of the national government."

Harrington Lake in Que. Is Renamed Lac Mousseau

OTTAWA (CP)—Harrington Lake, site of the prime minister's summer residence in Gattineau Park, was officially renamed Lac Mousseau two years ago, it was learned Thursday.

The change in name, adopted by the Quebec geographic board in December, 1962, was approved at that time by the Canadian permanent committee on geographical names, which works with provincial government to standardize Canadian place names.

However, because of the long tradition behind the name Harrington, which has been on the map of Quebec for 100 years, Harrington Lake will appear in brackets after Lac Mousseau on all future provincial maps.

The lake's name has been a thorny issue for historians for nearly 40 years.

It was revised this week by MP Louis-Joseph Pigeon (L-Joliette - L'Assomption - Montcalm) who put a question on the House of Commons order paper asking whether the name had been changed.

He said he had received numerous letters from his constituents, and particularly from the St. Jean Baptiste Society, requesting the French name be adopted.

The Quebec geographic board says a Monsieur Mousseau, a rather cloudy historical figure, variously referred to as a farmer, a trader and a trapper, was the first settler to establish himself in the area.

The Harrington Lake national capital committee, which runs Gattineau Park in which the lake is located, said the name Harrington is much older and much better established historically.

"They say the lake is named after John Harrington, a surveyor who settled beside the lake around 1807, and Monsieur Mousseau came on the scene much later."

A spokesman for the N.C.G. said Thursday that the committee knew nothing about the change of the lake's name.

"We've never heard of any such thing," he said. "But the committee has no objection to any new features in the park area are to be given names of French origin wherever possible in the future."

Mr. Pigeon's question, directed at Miss Minister Benoit, has not yet been answered in the Commons.

The Harrington Lake federal property, which includes a cottage, is in the middle of Gattineau Park and is reserved for the exclusive use of the prime minister and his guests.

Shakespeare Can Be Fun Proves Neptune Theatre

If Neptune Theatre players were trying to prove Shakespeare can be fun, they made their point with last night's audience at Confederation Centre Theatre.

The theatre was packed for the company's performance of Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" the second of two plays staged by Neptune here this week.

And while a Shakespearean drama laid in ancient Illyria, it was a far cry from a modern-day farce in an sophisticated New York City setting. "Twelfth Night" seemed to have tickled the collective funny-bone of last night's audience with as much persistence as "Come Blow Your Horn".

The younger set, including high school and college students, probably formed the bulk of the audience, who registered delight at humor ranging from subtle punning to obvious slapstick.

SPASMS OF HILARITY
Ted Follas stirred and giggled his way through the role of Sir Andrew Aguecheed with a skill which sent the audience into spasms of hilarity.

Adding to the merriment was David Renton's performance as Feste, the clown. The audience, with Bernard Brecken Sir Toby Belch in a drunk scene, one of the most laugh-provoking ones in the play.

Robert Maxwell played the part of Olivia, the haughty countess whose hand was sought by both Sir Andrew and Sir Toby.

Births, Marriages Down Here Deaths Show 1964 Increase

OTTAWA—Prince Edward Island's national population growth is declining so far this year, according to the recent vital statistics published by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

To the end of October the figures show a decline in both marriages and births over 1963 and a rise in the number of deaths.

In October, there were 200 births in the province compared to 204 for October 1963. That brought the total for the 10 months to 2,299 compared to 2,427 for the same period in 1963.

The marriage rate has also slowed with 67 marriages registered in October compared to 71 a year before and a 10-month total of 542 compared to 535. The 542 figure is, however, slightly above the three year 10-month average of 534 marriages.

Deaths were sharply higher in October at 164 compared to only 97 in October 1963 and a three year median of 63. For the 10 months there are 827 deaths compared to 863 the year before. Average over the last three years is 809.

In Canada as a whole, the 10-month figures show a decline in births of 2.1 per cent over 1963, an increase of 7.8 per cent in the number of marriages and a decline of 1.9 per cent in deaths.
