Opening less—king of spades. There is a right way to play cards and a wrong way. The great majority of errors made in the play of the cards can be attributed more to laziness than to ignorance or limited ability.

This general observation applies equally to the declarer and the defense. Both have an obligation to deal with each hand in its fullest aspect and not restrict their thoughts to the individual plays as they come along.

This hand illustrates the type of error we are talking about. West led the king of spades and continued with the queen when East signaled to come on. West then shifted to a diamond. Declarer won with the king and knocked out the ace of hearts. Later, South took the club finesse, which made exactly four hearts. Nothing startling occurred and, at a superficial glance, par was achieved by both sides. But something did go wrong. The contract should have been defeated.

As happens so often, the critical error was made at trick one. The culprit was East. He missed a golden opportunity. He should have overtaken the king of spades and returned the singleton club.

From then on declarer could do nothing to escape his fate. Whenever he led a trump East would grab the ace, put West in with a spade, and obtain a club ruff to defeat the contract.

It would certainly not have been difficult for West to read the situation if these plays had taken place. The combination of the overtake and the club return would make the subsequent defense crystal-clear.

Nor is it extraordinary for East to initiate this defense if he considers the hand as a whole and does not play mechanically on the first trick. He knows from the lead that his partner has the K-Q of spades. East, therefore, examining his own hand and dummy's, can count three defensive tricks.

The search for the fourth defensive trick is ended as soon as it occurs to East that a club ruff will upset declarer's appraisal.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE

Here's how to work it:
A X Y D L B A A X B
L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
