ON THE CLAIMS OF T. D'ARCY MCGEE, ESQ., (M. P. for Montreal West.)

TO THE CONFIDENCE AND SUPPORT OF THE IRISH AND THEIR DESCENDANTS IN THE DOMINION OF CANADA.

St. Mary's, Halifax,
July 22d, 1867.

Dear Sir:
At a crisis like the present, when the election members for the House of Commons in the new Dominion of Canada is about to take place, I feel it a duty to address you, as Secretary of Mr. D'Arcy McGee's Election Committee, and to draw attention to the fact, that in a humble volume in behalf of an Irishman, who, under a kind Providence, has been mainly instrumental in lifting up his fellow countrymen and contemporaries to a position which, in my heart, they never yet attained in this or perhaps in any other country.

Thomas D'Arcy McGee, as an individual, may have his faults and his shortcomings—from no mere human being, however great and good, is free from them; but as a public man, whose career I have narrowly watched with the dearest interest since he first touched the soil of Canada, I unhesitatingly say that he has earned for himself a lofty public character, and has done more for the real honor and advantage of Catholics and Irishmen, here and elsewhere, than any other known since the days of the immortal O'Connell. During the dark period of his brief career, he has shown a noble and unflinching New York, the brightest and best of Ireland's sons in America declared to myself that "McGee had the biggest mind, and was unquestionably the cleverest man and the greatest orator that Ireland ever produced." To this I have not only heartily subscribed then, when I had not even the advantage of a personal acquaintance; and now, at this critical moment, I do it the more earnestly, because I have had the opportunity of seeing his brilliant and noble public career in this country, which stamps him for all time to come, and beyond all competition, as our best representative Irishman. If I was asked to name the most noble and noblest of our countrymen in America, I should say, without a moment's hesitancy, that that man was Thomas D'Arcy McGee, the ex-Minister of Canada.

In his intellectual supremacy I would add one other thing, which is, a high-souled patriotism, which, amid the rubbish of popular clap-trap, and the ever tortuous eddies of unthinking and passionate love of country tiding on to ruin, made him stand out as a noble and noblest of our countrymen, and that, in a high-souled patriotism, which, amid the rubbish of popular clap-trap,
countrymen, and that, in a high-souled patriot-
