Chef Inspired Hints Improve Cake Mixes

WHAT is the difference between a cake homemade "from scratch" and one made from a mix?

The mix-made cakes save a few minutes' time in measuring, putting together and the washing of two or three cooking utensils. However, many mixes cost more than the ingredients needed in making standard cakes. Most mix - made cakes are sweeter and become dry much sooner.

The advantage is that the mix contains most of the ingredients used in making the cake, helpful if storage space is crowded or an ingredient lacking. Mixes have a definite place, especially on the "emergency" food shelf.

Ingredients On Hand

As most cake mixes call for the addition of fresh eggs and milk, be sure these are on hand before starting the cake. Also, check your baking pans to make certain they are the size designated on the package of mix. Follow directions accurately.

Much has been said and written about the "sameness" of flavor and texture of most cakes made from mixes. Every cake looks and tastes like every other one. The cakes have no "personality."

But the cakes made from mixes can be varied — just as we have learned how to change the appearance of ready-made dresses, blouses and suits by adding individual touches.

PERSONALIZING MIX-MADE CAKES FROM THE CHEF

Mesdames: In our test-kitchen Madame Allen and I have worked out many suggestions for personalizing Mix - Made Cakes. Par exemple:

Cinnamon - Toasted Cup Cakes: Prepare yellow or white cake mix following pkg. directions, baking in cupcake pans (number depends on pan size). Before baking, dust with 2½ tbsp. sugar mixed with ½ tsp. ground cinnamon. Serve warm.

Lemon Spice Cake: Prepare yellow cake mix by pkg. directions, beating into batter ½ tsp. ground cinnamon, ¼ tsp. each ground nutmeg and allspice. Put together with almost - cooled packaged lemon pie filling. Dust with confectioners' sugar.

Fresh Swedish Apple Cake: Prepare Sugar - Maple Cake following pkg. directions, adding ½ tsp. ground cardamom and using only 1 c. water. By hand, fold 1 c. coarse - chopped peeled tart apple into batter. Bake in oiled and floured 8x8x2 inch pan.

Peanut - Butter Cake: Make up Sugar - Maple Cake following pkg. directions, adding 1-3 c. chunk - style peanut butter with eggs and water. Put together and top with plain chocolate icing, immediately strewing 1-3 c. coarse - chopped (unsalted) roasted peanuts over top.

Nut Cake: Fold ¼ c. fine-chopped toasted nutmeats (any kind) into the cake batter. Bake as directed. Put together with raspberry jam and finish with whipped topping.

ELLEN'S DIARY

February's Silver Thaw Ices Paths And Drifts

"What will it be like to find a first dandelion?" Alex wondered this evening.

We sat by a window then chatting of this and that while waiting for James to come in to his supper. At times we caught the sound of voices from the porch or cellar, where he and Peter gathered up mangels for the sow's evening meal.

"This basket is full" we heard James say.

"But couldn't it hold this one more? It's only little" Peter coaxed.

"I couldn... maybe. Yes, I guess it could", James yielded.

February had given us a mild-dish, quiet day, with a touch of silver thaw which had iced the paths and drifts to make one choose steps carefully when out about the yards. And now the light was drifting down, early because there was no cheering afterglow in the west to detain the passing day.

Alex had been reading aloud as we spread the table. Mainly verse at the time, from a collection he had found in a former textbook of Mack's.

"I like the poetry" he had said. "But" he amended, "not all of it. This is a pretty one, for it lets you imagine you see the squirrel it tells you about. The first verse goes'

Wiskey, friskey,
Hippity hop.
Up he goes
To the treetop!"

While Alex stops at times to spell out any unfamiliar word, for a beginner in school, he manages quite well with his reading.

But now with his book put aside, we watched the twilight fall, like the millstream which drops at the spillways to pools in the deep of the valley.

"It will be lovely to find a first dandelion" we said. "A little new one with petals as yellow as butter. It will be a promise of so much."

"There'll be hundreds of them in the orchard" he remembered.

"And let's not think of their white heads" we smiled. "We hope they will bloom on and on."

Gently the dusk dropped, filling the low of the valley, dimming the white fields, darkening the woodlands, and the firry evergreens which here and there mark the hedgerows and the course of the stream...

"The Fat Stock Show is coming up" a visitor of this afternoon offered.

"Yes" James nodded. "It's not too far off now."

"You going?"

"Oh, I may. The young'uns will fikely be showing their 4-H calves—that if there doesn't come a storm that will keep them home."

"And we never know, do we? Can't trust March, that's for sure! Remember, it was only the other year, that, because it had stormed, the farmers had a hard time getting their stock in to show?"

A stilly, darkist night, this is Fields dimly white. But beneath the winter - coverlet are the dandelions of orchard and pasture, awaiting that call which will place them among those in the forefront of the welcome flowerings of spring.

Until tomorrow — Diary — Good-night.....

MR. AND MRS. GLENN TUPPER

Ceremony Is Performed At St. Paul's Church

St. Paul's Anglican Church, Charlottetown, was the scene of a ceremony uniting in marriage Phyllis Grace, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold W. Yeo, Charlottetown, and Alfred Glenn, son of Sgt. and Mrs. Glenn H. Tupper, RCAF Station, Summerside. Rev. Louis Elias performed the double ring ceremony.

The church was decorated with white mums and contrasting red carnations. Miniature rose flowers secured by white satin bows and encircled by white tulle marked the guest pews.

George Thompson provided the wedding music and accompanied the choir who sang "The Lord's Prayer" during the signing of the register.

The bride, entering the church on the arm of her father, wore a floor length gown of white peau de soie satin fashioned with a fitted lace jacket, long tapered sleeves and a high round neckline. Unpressed box - pleats at the back of the bell-shaped skirt fell gracefully to a slight train. Her shoulder length veil held in place by a pill box headdress, and her only jewellery was a pair of tiny pearl earrings, gift of the groom. She carried a bouquet of red roses entwined with ivy.

As her cousin's bridesmaid, Judith Lloyd wore pink organza over taffeta with matching pill - box hat, and carried a pink and white bouquet of mums.

Clayton Shields, Summerside, was the best man, while Kenneth Yeo, Charlottetown, and Donald Norton, Summerside, ushered the guests.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Yeo chose a dress of navy and blue with matching powder blue feather hat, and wore a corsage of blue tinted carnations. The mother of the groom chose a teal blue wool suit with a multicolored flowered hat and a corsage of rose colored carnations.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Lloyd. The bride's table was centered by a tiered wedding cake, decorated by the groom's mother, flanked by white candles held in white antique candleholders. Mrs. Herbert Yeo and Mrs. James Munn, grandmothers of the bride, poured.

Mr. Ellas asked the blessing and the best man proposed a toast to the bride to which the groom responded. The guest book was circulated by Mrs. Ralph Kneebone.

The bride and groom are residing in Annapolis Valley.

MARY HAWORTH

Mexican Divorce Interests Foreign Exchange Student

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Would you please give me the explanation in detail on what the Mexican divorce is and whether this divorce law applies to the alien?

I have wanted to get the divorce from my wife of seven years, she being apart from me, so that I can marry this girl with whom I am deeply in love.

My wife, who was twice unfaithful to me, from the beginning of our being apart (I came to this country as an exchange student) did not make answer to my asking for divorce. Therefore it is almost impossible to obtain the divorce from her.

In this situation I can't help thinking of the possibility of the Mexican divorce.

What solution is there for me, the alien (not an American citizen) to marry this girl of the same nationality as me? K.P.

DEAR K.P.: All I know of "the Mexican divorce" (to use your term) is what I read in the newspapers. And from this source of learning I get the impression that the Mexican divorce is a winked-at accomodation, patronized by multiple-marrying types in the jet-set, who want to go through motions of legally replacing their sex partners.

As you aren't an American citizen and as your wife (I gather) resides in her native land—which is yours also, and where she has remained while you've been here on a student visa—I would suppose you'd have to go home to your own country to be validly divorced and remarried.

However, for exact information, geared to your particular situation, inquire of the local Legal Aid Bureau (see listing under "L in the telephone directory).

As I understand, the Mexican divorce as a marital "out" for an American citizen, would have no standing in an American court of domestic relations if the cast off partner (in an American made marriage) chose to fight it to a finish.

Further, law-abiding American citizens used to take for granted that a legal marriage, American-made, if legally set aside would have to be dissolved in accordance with the laws of the jurisdiction in which the divorcing couple held permanent residence. Whatever became of that old fashioned principle?

M.H.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a teen-age girl, pregnant. For definite reasons I cannot marry the father of my child. Don't advise me to appeal to my parents, for they have advised me to appeal to you.

I have heard there are certain societies in certain cities that help girls in such situations. If you can give me the name of any such society nearby, I would apply to them.

G.F.

DEAR G.F.: The Salvation Army Service to Unmarried Parents (that is the formal title) has regional headquarters (for the Southern territory) in Atlanta, Ga. The mail address is: Post Office Box 5236, Station E, Atlanta 7, Ga. The street address is 675 Seminole avenue northeast, Atlanta 7, Georgia. Write to the Salvation Army representative there, for information on how to locate the help you need.

M.H.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: It was Stephen Decatur, not Patrick Henry, who said "Our country, right or wrong." He said it in this context: "Our country! In her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right but our country, right or wrong."

Patrick Henry is best remembered for his heroic statement: "Give me liberty, or give me death!" It was voiced in his speech to the Virginia Convention, March, 1775, in the following context:

"Is life so dear or peace so sweet as to be purchased at the price of chains and slavery? Forbid it, Almighty God! I know not what course others may take, but as for me, give me liberty, or give me death!"

N.P.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of (The Guardian.)
