GUARD MOSLEMS IN ORAN

French soldiers and a barbed wire barricade separate the Moslem and European quarters in Oran, Algeria, where secret army assaults have been savage and frequent against the Moslems. This native was well-guarded as he proceeded through a short stretch of the European section on his way to another Moslem area in the embattled city. The Algerian rebel government in Tunis is expected to broadcast orders to the Moslems that may call for all . out reprisals against the secret army.

Souris Reports Better Catches

Lobster fishermen in the Souris area yesterday reported the best catches so far this season and said it indicated an upward climb. Catches yesterday were reported at better than a pound a trap.

At North Lake a heavy sea has been running for two days but fishermen expect to get out today to their traps. They say they expect some damage but as most of the gear is in deep water it is not expected to be too severe.

A few lobsters were landed in Tignish yesterday but fishermen explain "the traps haven't had a chance to get wet yet." More than half the gear is out in the Tignish and Alberton areas and by this evening nearly all is expected to be in the water unless the wind changes on shore and calls a halt to setting.

The large ice field which has been slowly drifting eastward was reported generally located from Malpeque eastward to Blooming Point with the largest mass, about five miles across, off Covehead.

The ice came ashore in the Cavendish — Rustico area and is reported being held firmly although the field is thinning out to the westward.

Fishermen in the French River and New London areas said it was too early yesterday to make any estimate of how their traps which had been covered by the ice fared.

Fishermen in the Morell area have been keeping an eye on the eastward progress of the ice and many feel it may break up under the pounding of the heavy sea which has been running before it reaches and does any damage to their traps which are already in the water.

Driver Charged With Negligence

SUMMERSIDE — A Parkdale resident, Donald Alexander MacPherson, was charged with being criminally negligent in the operation of a motor vehicle causing bodily harm to Elizabeth Charlotte McKenna, at a sitting of Prince County Magistrate's court before Magistrate W. Chester S. MacDonald yesterday.

The case was adjourned for preliminary hearing on May 28, with bail set at $500 cash or $1500 property. J. Watson MacNaught, QC, is representing the accused.

The charge arose out of an accident Wednesday afternoon at Carleton which sent Miss McKenna, a 17-year-old Borden resident, to hospital with multiple fractures of both legs.

The girl was returning from Summerside High school by the school bus, and was struck as she stepped away from the bus on the highway in front of Norma's restaurant at Carleton.

Although in shock when admitted Wednesday, the girl was reported concious yesterday and not in critical condition.

The preliminary hearing into a charge of rape, brought against Leo Austin MacLeod, of Albany, was further adjourned until Saturday, May 12, at which time the court expects to hear all evidence.

Speeding Charge Is Dismissed

SUMMERSIDE — A charge of driving without due care and attention (speeding) was dismissed against J. Waldron Cameron of Albany, in county magistrate's court on Tuesday.

In a previous sitting of the court evidence had been heard from Mr. and Mrs. Cameron, and RCMP Cnst. Dan Durling.

The charge had been laid after the legislative amendment raising the speed limit to 60 mph, and during the time when there was confusion over when

DECISION

Robert Acorn presided. William Acorn acted as secretary. Both are from Mount Mellick.

Mr. Wheatley reviewed efforts he, and a group associated with him made over a 15-year period to get government backing for the proposed abattoir.

He said the present government had promised an abattoir in its election platform and charged that Island farmers lost as much as $50 to $60 per head on cattle the past year because of low prices received.

Mr. Siddall said a modern killing plant could be constructed for $125,000, that would handle 1,000 to 1,500 hogs per week and probably 100 head of cattle. That's big enough for this province at present, and it could be enlarged later if needed, he suggested.

It would be the greatest thing that ever happened to your province, "for then you'd have competition," he told the meeting which comprised several hundred people made up of farmers and a smattering of city people who sat in as onlookers.

If you break even the first year you'll do well, said the man who said he lost $5,000 in his first year of operation but paid that much in income taxes the next year. He strongly advised against a processing plant. The new plant at Halifax lost money, he said, because they did not have enough skilled and experienced men in it.

Strong Criticism Voiced By Hereford Group Head

Strong criticism was levelled at the Farmer's Co-operative Abattoir Association at last night's executive meeting of the P.E.I. Hereford Breeders, by its president, Edwin A. MacRae, who stated that he thought the idea of an abattoir was perhaps a good one, but that he strongly disapproved of the methods used by the Abattoir Association in pressing their case before the Government. "What do they hope to gain", he asked, "by attempting to break down the doors of the Executive Council?" Mr. MacRae suggested that such methods not only discredited the members of the Abattoir Association, but every Island cattleman, as well.

The Hereford Breeders president recalled that the previous government had promised to loan the Abattoir Association $50,000, if they in turn matched this with a similar amount. "This was a good arrangement," Mr. MacRae said, "it never bore fruit because the Abattoir Association did nor fill their part of the bargain, and now they want a much larger loan and compensation as well."

Another observation made by the president of the Island Hereford Breeders was that government loans were fine if they were accompanied by individual initiative, "but", he said, "it's getting to a point where government assistance, instead of being a last resort, is becoming a "first resort".

The general feeling of the meeting was that this was a farmers problem, and it must also be a farmers solution.

A number of other topics were discussed at the well-attended meeting, including an announcement that Clark Johnstone was the new treasurer of the Association.
