

Giant Candy Canes Provide Cheery Holiday Atmosphere

Christmas means different things to different people. For the fairytale of Old St. Nick swooping down out of the polar regions a bright and light reindeer. To the older boys and girls, it's the excitement of bicycles and doll houses. To the parents of youngsters, it's the pleasure of watching children opening presents. For grand parents, it's a general feeling of relief in relieving their own early trials.

Everyone from toddler to septuagenarian gets an excitement of excitement and gaiety from the transformation of houses and homes into bright decorations. Come Christmas, most homes are adorned and brightened with wreaths, lighted trees, lawn figures and streamers, the winter world takes on a gay atmosphere.

Here is a simple little decoration that brightens any home, store or car, a colossal 6 ft. candy cane. It is something you can make in no time at all from inexpensive panelboard. The candy cane is made of a fine line for the cane and bow. Full-size painting guides show exactly how to make the candy cane as it looks completely round.

Most stores will hold used up at least two of these canes. They can also be attached to trees, front porches and lamp-stands. One on every second champagne, alternated with a Santa Claus or similar other symbol of Christmas makes a cheerful and inexpensive decoration for your street. It's fun making these colorful decorations. By following a pattern even youngsters can turn out as many candy canes as are needed.

Suitability of Building Site Important Cost Consideration

The cost of constructing the house you want will be greatly influenced by the suitability of the lot you purchase. The lot to Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation. Check of the building site, therefore, is a careful thought on the part of prospective home owners. The price you will have to pay for a lot is governed by numerous factors, such as the location, lot, quality of the neighborhood, the demand for land in the locality, the availability of water and sewer services.

Before choosing a lot you should have a definite idea of the type of house your family needs. For instance, a long narrow lot would not be suitable if you are planning a low ranch type bungalow.

After you decide on the type of house you want and the price you can check on the suitability of the available lots in the neighborhood you have selected.

SURFACE FEATURES

When looking over possible building sites, first attention should be given to the surface features. See that there are no large outcroppings of rock, because this will mean expensive excavation. On the other hand check the land to make sure that it is in its original state, and not just a gully or swamp, that has been filled in with loose earth. Trees and shrubs on the property are a good sign that it is in its natural state. They also add to the value of the property and enhance its attractiveness when the house is built.

A lot that slopes gently up from the street has many advantages from the standpoint of appearance and drainage, as well as cost, in such instances, much of the soil that has been excavated can be used to advantage in grading the site. A lot that slopes down from the street will mean less excavation and the construction of your home will be brought in to raise the lot up to a satisfactory level. This type of lot also makes a number of drainage problems.

You should also enquire about the present tax rate on the property you are considering and investigate the probable assessment of the property after completion of the house. Local authorities will be able to give you an estimate. The main concern in considering the tax feature is to determine the relative advantages of the tax levied on the property in comparison with the taxes on similar properties.

If you hope to obtain a mortgage loan to assist in financing the construction of your house, remember that the amount you may borrow will be influenced largely by the suitability of the lot you acquire. Under the circumstances discuss the purchase of the lot with your banker in consideration with the approved lender of your choice before making any final decision.
