

TAP AT THE DOOR was one of the light-hearted scenes in the operetta presented by Notre Dame Academy.

Sprightly Operetta Presented By Notre Dame Academy

Last evening an expectant and cheerful audience filled Notre Dame Academy auditorium for the presentation of a sprightly operetta "Kathleen, the Maid of Killarney". The Notre Dame High School Choir was pitched to the proper key to make a gay musical success of their tuneful entertainment.

Against a scenic background of exceptional beauty, stood Bridget's cottage, and around this cottage the characters and chorus ranged themselves for the song, dance, and dialogue which comprised the performance. Each member of the cast entered into her part with fine feeling which made the delightful play work out smoothly and successfully.

The rivalry between the fair Kathleen and another Irish lass, Nora; the superstitious touches added by Bridget's humoring the "little people" with a night-bowl of cream; and the spirit of wit and gaiety which ran through the whole like a silver thread combined to carry the audience to old Ireland o'er the sea.

The High School Choir and its directress, Sister St. Mary Honora are to be congratulated on a pleasing performance, done with the usual Notre Dame graceful ease and perfection.

Murnaghan (as Peter) accompanied Eleanor Hayes (his sister Mary) while Irish folk dancers keep time to lilting music. They are Margaret White, Marsha Wellner, Karen Mahar and Evelyn Fraser.

POULTRY DISEASES

Poultry suffer the greatest losses from disease of all the domestic animals. In the losses from disease, one must consider not only actual mortality but losses from poor hatchability, growth, and production; poorly finished market birds; and overhead expense of partly filled houses and idle equipment.

The most efficient and economical method of controlling disease lies in the use of preventive measures. The old adage "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure", certainly applies to poultry diseases. The chicken has small unit value and medicine and treatment often cost more than the bird is worth. Most diseases have a lasting effect on growth and production. Flock preventive measures should be used. These include selection for disease resistance, proper housing, clean range, proper feeding, culling out unhealthy birds, and quarantine of new stock.

PROPER HOUSING

A flock should have adequate floor space. This reduces the chances of cannibalism and the spread of disease by close contact and contaminated litter. Provide adequate ventilation but avoid drafts. Avoid sudden changes in temperature. Drafts and extremes in temperature lower the resistance of birds and make them more susceptible to disease. Use dropping pits to lessen the chances of spreading disease by droppings. These should be screened.

My Life of Terror as a Drug addict

Ex-Prisoner # 104521 purchased a ticket on a nightmare merry-go-round when he tried his first fix "just for experience." What he experienced was a snowball ride to Hell. In this first-hand account of one man's struggle against an existence which he looks back on now as "sordid and disgusting", he describes the horror and anguish of withdrawal from drugs; the harried life led by addicts as pushers and pimps, "boosters", "heelers" and "B. and E." men; his experiences in the Drug Hut and with Narcotics Anonymous. Weekend readers will be shocked at some aspects of Vancouver's drug traffic as explored by a former addict.

Lift for the Lonely North

The Flying Boxcars of the R.C.A.F.'s Air Transport Command not only lift everything from toothbrushes to tractors — they also lift the monotony that clouds 13 of Canada's most isolated Arctic weather posts. Geologist Stewart D. MacDonald who spent five summers at a post in the northern desert knows something of its bleak monotony, as well as its spectacular beauty which he captures with his camera in our Weekend Magazine.

Top Scholars in "Crazy School"

In 1930 hostile public opinion considered the parents who were founders and owners of St. George's school in Montreal to be "crazy". In the past 15 years the school has produced three Rhodes Scholars, six Ph.Ds, and several university staff members. In addition, over 80% of the students go to university. Weekend Magazine tells the story of the method behind the madness of a bold and unique experiment, which was "crazy" like a fox!
