

Command Integration Has Unusual Twists

OTTAWA (CP) — Integration of the armed forces' command structure at National Defence Headquarters here has taken some complicated turns but at least one desired result is being achieved — a reduction in personnel.

But the civilians in the defence department have out-integrated the military.

At Dec. 31, 1965, there were 4,483 civilians and 3,269 military personnel at defence headquarters.

A defence department spokesman said Tuesday that the numbers at Oct. 31, 1965, last date for which figures are available, were 2,612 civilian and 2,552 servicemen. This is a reduction of 1,871 civilians and 717 military.

The integrated Canadian Forces Headquarters was originally established Aug. 1, 1964, with five branches. One of these — operational readiness — was later abolished and its duties taken over by the branch of the vice-chief of defence staff.

Air Commodore R. F. Miller, chief of organization and manpower control in the comptroller general's branch, says organization of the vice-chief's branch evolved only after a "significant number" of changes.

Under the vice-chief, for instance, are a number of senior deputies, including a deputy chief for plans. Under this deputy are a director-general for plans and a director-general for intelligence.

HAS SUBDIVISIONS

The intelligence directorate includes four sub-branches — intelligence services, intelligence production, intelligence operations and the joint intelligence bureau. There is also a directorate of scientific and technical intelligence run by the services and the Defence Research Board.

The director-general for plans is responsible for long-range and current planning, the latter breaking down into interational and contional planning.

The deputy chief for plans is also responsible for combat development and for this purpose he has three more directorates — maritime forces, land forces and air forces.

Also under the vice-chief of defence staff is a deputy chief for operations. He is responsible for operational readiness and he has three main directorates — maritime, land and air.

Also reporting to the vice-chief are the director-general for operational research, the director-general of programs, the director of flight safety and the director of nuclear weapons.

As one senior officer put it, there has been a "outbreak of branches."

Another added: "But if you think it's a labyrinth now, you should have seen it before integration."

Call For Competitive Realism Issued By Railway President

MONTREAL (CP) — N. R. Crump, chairman and chief executive officer of the CPR, called on government, labor and management in a year-end message to meet international competition in a "realistic manner."

Speaking of "inflationary pressure on Canada," he said "Canada cannot prosper and cannot develop if he becomes uncompetitive in the world."

Mr. Crump termed 1965 a year of "continued growth in the Canadian economy and of continuing adaptation by Canadian, Pacific to both the opportunities presented and the problems raised."

Economic activity led to the addition of $67,000,000 of new equipment, the "most substantial program of acquisition of new equipment since 1957."

An increase of six per cent near the end of September in the non-agricultural revenue "demonstrates the fact railway freight transportation is one of the true growth sectors of the Canadian economy," he said.

STRAINED BY GRAIN

Grain sales to Russia and China strained the company's facilities, but this would be eased with the delivery of new freight equipment.

He described 1965 as the best year in the history of Canadian Pacific Airlines. Passenger-miles increase 20 per cent over 1964 and air cargo showed impressive gains.

Canadian Pacific Telecommunications expanded the telex network by about 24 per cent with some 1,900 new subscribers. Automatic switching systems installed at Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver would lead to more efficient and economical handling of message traffic when they became operational in early 1966.

Canadian Pacific Oil and Gas Ltd. was one of the 1965 leaders in Western Canada oil drilling activities.

At the end of November, of 152 wholly-owned wells drilled, 81 produced oil and 18 produced gas.

Current oil production, including condensates, was running at 5,600 barrels a day and gas at 38,900,000 cubic feet a day.

Log production by Pacific Logging Co. on Vancouver Island and in the Kootenay area of British Columbia was above the 1964 level.

LOGGING ROADS BUILT

Canadian Pacific Investments Ltd. continued the policy of increasing holdings of common stocks in the company's investment portfolio. At Nov. 30, common stock holdings, including commitments, totalled $151,500,000 compared with $126,500,000 at Dec. 31, 1964.

He referred to the "rapid increase in Maritime labor costs and the effect of significantly expanded air competition on the North Atlantic" as a "serious problem" in the company's transatlantic steamship passenger operations.

Typical of the inflationary pressures on Canada were "the enormous wage demands which have been served on the railway industry by unions representing their employees."

"These inflationary pressures are a cause for most serious concern."

COCKTAIL PANTS OUT

TORONTO (CP) — The general manager of the Royal York Hotel here says he would not permit the wearing of ladies' cocktail pants in the hotel's posh imperial room.

Angus MacKinnon, who was commenting on a ban of the new-fashion pants by the Chateau Laurier in Ottawa, where a woman was turned away from a posh supper club after seeking entrance in the long, silk pants.

Mr. MacKinnon said he agreed with the action of Rudi P. P. P., executive assistant manager at the Chateau Laurier.

He said the Royal York hasn't been faced with the situation, "and I hope we don't."

"They might be all right in the drawing room, but we wouldn't let them in the Imperial dining room... not where people are dancing and wearing tuxedos and formal dresses."

Student Pleads Guilty In CNR Robbery Attempt

BATHURST, N. B. (CP) — Louis Marie Gauthier of Shippegan, N.B., a student at Bathurst College here, was remanded to jail until Jan. 10 when he pleaded guilty Wednesday to a charge of attempted robbery with violence.

A charge of attempted robbery with violence against Michael Reid was adjourned to Jan. 5.

The two were arrested after two masked men entered the CNR station here Dec. 20 and tied up two employees. They fled empty handed when a third employee entered the building.
