CHILD WIVES OF INDIA.

LOVE SOMETIMES LASTS LONG IN HINDOO HOMES.

Ceremonies for Four Days—An Interesting Article on the Marriage Customs of the Country—Single Life Prohibited.

To give a fair idea of Hindoo women and marriage customs I must go back to the ancient times and see how and why customs changed, writes a native of India in the Forum.

It seems that the system did not prove a good one in the warm climate, where women develop very early, and was changed, and the giving of the daughter by the father is the prevailing method at present.

The Brahmin has to get his daughter married before she attains puberty. This custom has crept into religion. The Hindoo religion strictly forbids single life for women or men, especially must the woman be married.

Owing to this rule, if a Brahmin's daughter is not married before she reaches the age of puberty, she loses her caste and no one will marry the girl. Thus, when a poor man has more than one daughter it is a misfortune for him.

The Hindu father himself has to find out a suitable husband for his daughter, so he goes to a gentleman who has a son. He asks the father about the family, the property, the health and education of the boy.

Then he asks the father of the boy to marry his son to his daughter. The father of the boy is very rich, he asks thousands of dollars.

The marriage ceremony is conducted like this. The bridegroom comes to the place where the bride lives and stops in a big house or a temple. The bride's father has to look to the comforts of the whole party. They are to be treated as guests. On the evening of the wedding day the bridegroom, riding on a palanquin or a horse, or in a palanquin, and a procession is formed. Torches and flower garlands made of wax and paper are carried on the shoulders. Nautch girls come before the bridegroom. Band music is played and fireworks are set off. It is a beautiful sight to see this procession.

By the side of the bridegroom, walks his sister with a silver lamp, and all the ladies lead the procession, the gentlemen following. In some parts of India the bridegroom comes near the door the father of the bride again comes to receive him. He presents him a coconut and presents to give him his daughter in marriage. This promise is the betrothal. Then he takes the hand of the bridegroom, and escorts him to a seat which is raised in the middle of the canopy, and seats him on it.

This raised seat is made beautiful, having ornamental arch and a charming arch and a small dome overhead. The whole canopy is illuminated. On the right of the groom sit all the ladies; on the left sit all the gentlemen. They are seated on cushions. The Nautch girls and two parties, dance before the ladies in general. The hands play, and when the appointed time arrives the time of the marriage must be observed to a second, and therefore, there is always a great deal of haste among the ladies to adorn and make the bride ready. The bride is escorted and brought before the bridegroom by her mother and sister. She stands in the presence of the bridegroom, who also stands, and a yellow piece of cloth is held between them. Meanwhile rice (colored red) is distributed in small quantities to all the guests assembled to be equally thrown it on the pair in token of their blessing.

Then the yellow cloth is removed, and the bride and bridegroom stand face to face. Then the father of the bride stands near and repeats the Sanskrit sentences, which mean: "The bridegroom is a not a slave, has not lost caste or has not been polluted, and is healthy. To him I give my daughter in the presence of God, fire and the priests." The bride's father says: "My daughter is healthy; she has a brother. She is not of the same family as the bridegroom. This, my daughter, I give to you. Protect her as her father did."

Then the bridegroom promises: "In religion, in money, in conjugal rights and in reputation I will never leave her." This promise is made three times and he knows that he now has a wife, and that he must care for her. And he does so secretly when, later, he lives with her. After this the sacred fire is kindled, and the bridegroom and the bride's squire stand together with a knot. The bridegroom takes the hand of the bride and walks seven times around the fire. This is called "the seven steps." All the while the priest chants the Vedie mantras. There are many minor ceremonies after this, and they continue for four days. On the fourth day the bridegroom takes the bride to his house with the same pomp as when he came for her. The young pair ride together, the wife sitting on his left side. For the first three days she stays with her mother-in-law, and returns to her parents. After some months she is sent back to her husband's house for a few months. While living there she occupies her mother-in-law's or sister-in-law's room. She does not even speak to her husband. The utmost modesty is to be observed by a Hindoo woman. She must not talk loudly or giggle and laugh in the streets. The young pair thus religiously married, love each other from childhood, and that love becomes stronger when developed and is everlasting.

When the girl becomes of age the wife and husband live together. In India the woman is brought up from childhood in the mildest way possible, and is taught the home duties—to love her husband and to obey him. Sometimes I will say in one case out of a million—there is a disagreement, and the wife goes to live with her parents; but such cases are very, very few, almost say there is no such case. Of course the widow has not the privilege of remarrying, except in the lowest classes, but the man can marry again.

MOUNSET-SULLY.

The Celebrated French Actor.

The features of Mounset-Sully are familiar to Canadians, as the great actor, during his American tour, played to delighted audiences in this country.

He is a native of France, and there is a soldier, an intellectual in his delineations which places him in the front rank of great actors.

Mounset-Sully is a patron of the fine arts. "Via Mariani," and "L'Esprit" are great actors speak of it. "When we sing, we sing as gay, we love, we love as the future, of glory of the infinite. A fact, nothing can be better for strength."

"Via Mariani." And this is the universal testimony that this famous actor wine nourishes and strengthens the mind as well as the body, building up the nervous system, and all despondency, and giving a new lease of life to those who were disposed to cultivate a morbid pessimism.

If you desire to know something about the celebrated persons who have spoken admirably of "Via Mariani," and your name to Lawrence A. Wilson & Co., Montreal, and they will send you an album containing their portraits, free.

WHERE WOMEN HAVE SUFFRAGE.

In a Great Many Countries They Have a Say at the Polls.

The countries of the world where women already have some suffrage have an area of over 18,000,000 square miles, and their population is over 250,000,000.

In Great Britain women vote for all elective officers except members of parliament.

In France the women teachers elect women members on all boards of education.

In Sweden women vote for all elective officers except representatives; also, indirectly, for members of the house of lords.

In Norway they have school suffrage. In Ireland the women vote for the harbor boards, poor law guardians, and in Belfast for municipal officers.

In Russia women householders vote for all elective officers and on all local matters.

In Finland they vote for all elective officers.

In Austria-Hungary they vote, by proxy, for all elective officers.

In Canada and Denmark they have the privilege of doing so in local elections in person.

In Italy widows vote for members of parliament.

In the Madras Presidency and the Bombay Presidency (Hindooistan) the women exercise the right of suffrage in all municipalities.

In all the countries of Russian Asia they can do so wherever a Russian colony settles. In the United States, in the whole of their vast Asian possessions, and carrying with them everywhere the "mir," or self-governing village, wherein women who are heads of households are permitted to vote.

Women have municipal suffrage in Cape Colony, which rules a million square miles. Municipal woman suffrage rules in New Zealand, and in parliamentary elections.

In Iceland, in the North Atlantic, the Isle of Man (between England and Ireland) and Pitcairn Island, in the South Pacific, the full woman suffrage.

In the Dominion of Canada women have municipal suffrage in every province and in the Northwest Territories. In Ontario they vote for all elective officers except in the election of members of the legislature and parliament.

In the United States twenty-eight states and territories have given women some form of suffrage.

School suffrage in various degrees is granted to women in Arizona, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Idaho, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, Texas, Vermont, and Wisconsin.

In Arkansas and Missouri women vote, by petition, on liquor license in many cases.

In Delaware suffrage is exercised by women in several municipalities.

In Kansas they have equal suffrage with men at all municipal elections.

About fifty thousand women voted in 1884. In Montana they vote on all local taxation.

In New York they can and do vote at school elections. The question of the constitutionality of the vote is still undecided. They vote also in many places in this state on local improvements, such as gas and electric lighting, paving, sewers, and municipal bonds.

In Utah women voted until disfranchised by the "Edmunds law," which they promptly organized to demand its repeal.

In Pennsylvania a law was passed in 1880 under which women vote on local improvements by signing or refusing to sign petitions therefor.

In Wyoming women have voted on the same terms with men since 1870. The constitution of the state constitution unanimously inserted a provision securing them full suffrage. This constitution was ratified by the voters at a special election by about three-fourths majority. Congress refused to require the disfranchisement of women and admitted the state July 10, 1890.

Hood's Cured After Others Failed

Blanche Atwood, Sanguerville, Maine.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass. 'Gentlemen—I feel that I cannot say enough in favor of Hood's Sarsaparilla. For five years I have been troubled with scrofula in my face and throat. Several kinds of medicine which I tried did not do me any good, and when I commenced to take Hood's Sarsaparilla there was a large lurch on my neck so sore that I could not bear the slightest touch. When I had taken one bottle of this medicine, the sores had gone, and before I had finished the second the lurches had entirely disappeared.'—Blanche Atwood, Sanguerville, Maine.

"N. B. If you desire to take Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be misled by any cheap imitations of the genuine medicine."

The Art

of never forgetting is acquired by learning to remember the right thing at the right time.

For instance, should you have any uneasiness at any time, think of Adams' TUTTI FRUTTI. It gives immediate and permanent relief.
