

Liberal Party Caucus

OTTAWA (CP)—Liberal MPs and senators opened a two-day conference Sunday aimed at planning business for the parliamentary session which starts Tuesday and opening new ways for MPs to influence government policy in its formative stages.

The caucus was a whole still in the making. Chairman Jean-Jacques Lussier, MP for Montreal and parliamentary secretary to Prime Minister Pearson, told the opening session that much remains to be done to improve a new liaison system among the cabinet, the party and the MPs. He said the caucus will be held at a conference mid-way through the last session.
