

Lone Guides Of P. E. I. Gather For Company Games

Something unique in the annals of Girl Guiding on Prince Edward Island is in progress at Central Royalty Hall where 64 Lone Guides (those Guides who for some reason—usually because of where they live—are unable to belong to an organized Guide Company) with 8 leaders, are spending five days together at the Lone Guide Merry-Go-Round-Up. Here they are learning more about the game of Guiding and enjoying the experience of working in a group instead of each one on her own.

The volunteer leaders for this project are eight adult women who are giving their time and energy so that these girls may have this Round-Up. They are headed by Mrs. Fred Osborne, Lone Guide Commissioner for Prince Edward Island. Following her college days, Mrs. Osborne taught school for two years before entering a training school for nurses. After graduation she practiced her profession and for three years she was a surgical nurse with the Grenfell Mission, doing pioneer nursing in some of the outposts in Labrador where there was not a doctor within 100 miles.

It was while she was in Labrador that she met her husband and with him spent 14 years at Belle Isle where he was in charge of the Lighthouse. There they received supplies and mail only twice a year. During the war, when her husband was overseas with the Canadian Army, Mrs. Osborne returned to nursing duties and served with the American Red Cross, doing pioneer nursing on Islands off the coast of Maine. Mr. Osborne is now an Inspector of Lighthouses and he and Mrs. Osborne are living just outside of Charlottetown.

The other leaders are also well qualified for the task of looking after the 64 girls at the Round-Up. They are: Mrs. John Munn, a warranted Guide Captain who prior to her marriage was a Deaconess with the Church of England; Mrs. Rupert Godfrey who is a warranted Ranger Captain and who before her marriage taught school in this province; Mrs. Hector Jenkins who is a warranted Guide Lieutenant; Miss Cameron and Mrs. A.M. Johnston who are both registered nurses; at Mrs. Stetson and Mrs. Bliss Lockhart who are both mothers of Guides. One of the happiest girls at the Round Up is Anne, a patient at the Orthopedic Centre in Charlottetown, who has been a Lone Guide for several months. Anne has to stay in a wheel chair, but each day two of the other Guides are having the honour of being her special escorts and seeing that she does not miss any of the fun. During the Merry-Go-Round-Up which, incidentally, gets its name from the Merry-Go-Round, the magazine which Mrs. Osborne sends out to her Lone Guides each month, the Lone Guides are learning many interesting things and are becoming familiar with those parts of Guiding which are difficult to explain by correspondence or by the radio talks which Mrs. Osborne is able to give through the kindness and generosity of Station C.F.C.Y. They will learn how the Patrol System works, how the horseshoe formation is used, Court of Honour meetings conducted, etc. In addition, they are working for some of their Guide badges and there will be a morning devoted to testing for those badges. There are to be hikes into Charlottetown and to the shore, a visit to Central Creameries where they will see how ice cream is made, and to the Patriot Publishing Company where they will be shown how a newspaper is printed and folded by machinery ready for distribution. One of the highlights of the Round-Up is a scheduled bus trip to Moncton. Later they are meeting some New Brunswick Lone Guides at the Magnetic Hill outside of Moncton, and Mrs. Sikorski of The Inn, is treating them to home made ice cream and cake. On Sunday the Lone Guides are to attend Church services at the Basilica and Trinity United Church. The Round Up concludes on Monday after what will doubtless have been an ever-to-be-remembered experience for both the Guides and their leaders.

GRAZ, Austria (Reuters) — The body of a deaf and dumb 15-year-old girl was found by a search party Monday near the peak of 7,000-foot Mount Hichsteinspitze.

EAGER RECRUITS

First thought of 168 recruits who recently completed their initial 16 weeks training in the Canadian Army and joined the ranks of the 2nd Battalion The Royal Canadian Regiment at London, Ont., was parachute training. During the summer they will work with the battalion at Camp Gagetown, N. B., but in the fall they will enter the world of airborne training. After a graduation parade, during which they were accepted into the ranks of the 2nd Battalion by the commanding officer

Lt. Col. Gordon Corbould of New Westminster, B.C., the young recruits wasted no time in having a look at parachute training equipment. Talk centred around jumps and jumpers. In the photo are: left to right, Pte. H. C. McGrath, 31 Davidson

Wild Horses Are Nuisance

EDMONTON (CP)—About 1,000 wild horses have become a nuisance on the grazing lands along the eastern slope of the Rockies, and the board which administers the territory is looking for someone who can round them up.

The horses are mainly in a 100-square-mile area known as Kootenay Flats, southwest of Nordreg in the Clearwater Forest, about 200 miles southwest of Edmonton. The herd began to build up during the 1930s when a rancher abandoned his herd of Percherons because of the depression. He never came back and the herd turned wild. It was joined by strays from Indian bands and ranches and farms.

WANT SAFEGUARDS The Clearwater Forest is administered by the Eastern Rockies Forest Conservation Board, on which the federal government has one representative and the provincial government two. H. G. Jensen, deputy lands and forests minister, is one of the Alberta representatives. "We merely intend to agree with someone who would take out the horses and his profit would pay for the trouble," said Mr. Jensen. The hunter would sell the horses for dog and mink food. "We would want an agreement to make sure that nothing illegal is done," he added. "A person could jeopardize the area by starting fires. We would want the agreement because we want reliable and responsible persons."

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP)—Lake shipping traffic has returned to normal after fog tied up more than 95 vessels in the St. Mary's River Saturday and Sunday, shipping officials said Tuesday.
