DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

A Cryptogram Quotation

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

(By Thornton W. Burgess)

IN THE NICK OF TIME

In the nick of time is time enough
But makes the going rather rough.
—Peter Rabbit.

Peter Rabbit was running for his life. That was nothing new for Peter. He had run for his life many times. So far he always had won the race. Of course, if he hadn't he wouldn't be running now. Peter was running hard.

Reddy Fox was running but not for his life. He was running for his dinner. He was trying to cut Peter off from the dear Old Brier-patch. Reddy was running hard. He wanted that Rabbit dinner.

A Dog called a Beagle, a kind of small Hound, was running behind Peter. He wasn't running for his life. He wasn't running for his dinner. He was running for fun of chasing someone and perhaps in the end catching him and shaking him to death. He was running hard, but not too hard. He didn't have to keep that Rabbit in sight. He could trust his nose to find him.

Peter wasn't afraid the Dog would catch him before he could reach the dear Old Brier-patch. No, sir, he wasn't afraid of that. He could run faster than that Dog and he knew it. It was Reddy Fox coming from another direction whom he must beat to the Old Brier-patch, and Reddy could run. There was no doubt about that. The way he was getting over the ground was something to see. It really was. But Peter wasn't admiring it. He was keeping his eyes on the dear Old Brier-patch and the nearest entrance to one of his private little paths leading straight into one of the worst tangles of thorny vines and briers in the whole Brier-patch. Peter had cut it himself. It was just big enough for him to use without getting scratched, but anyone bigger than himself would be sure to have his coat torn and to be badly scratched.

He dodged, and Reddy's open mouth closed on nothing more than a few hairs from Peter's white tail.

Peter knew that Reddy Fox wouldn't even try to follow him in there. Long ago Reddy has learned better than to try that.

Watching from a safe place in the dear Old Brier-patch from which she could see outside was Mrs. Peter, her heart in her mouth. Anyway it seemed so. Of course it wasn't. Would Peter be able to get there in time? There was a time when it didn't look as if he possibly could. Then her heart seemed to sink like a stone.

"What ever did he leave the dear Old Brier-patch for?" she sobbed. "I knew something like this would happen. I told him so over and over again. Why couldn't he stay at home and be happy? Oh dear, Reddy Fox is going to catch him this time! He is! He is!" She shut her eyes for just a minute.

It did look so. Yes, sir, it did so. It looked very much as if Reddy would reach the dear Old Brier-patch before Peter, and so head him off. Mrs. Peter opened her eyes only to hurriedly close them again. She didn't want to see what she was now sure going to happen. It was bad enough to have it happen; she didn't want to see it happen.

But she couldn't keep her eyes closed. She just couldn't. In spite of her they flew open. If only Peter could run a little faster. He couldn't. He was doing his very best and it looked very much as if that wasn't quite enough. She closed her eyes again as it looked as if Peter was going to run right into Reddy's very jaws. She gave a little gasp and opened her eyes just in time to see what happened.

What was it? Why, Peter did that one thing that he seems able to do better than any one else when running at full speed. He dodged and Reddy's open mouth closed on nothing more than a few hairs from Peter's white tail.

Contract Bridge

BAD SELECTION

South's line of play in the following deal was not the best.

North dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

North: ♠ K 7, ♥ A K J 6, ♦ A J 5, ♣ A K 4 3
West: ♠ A J 8, ♥ 6 2, ♦ 7 4, ♣ 10 9 7 5
East: ♠ Q 10 5, ♥ 4 3, ♦ Q 9 3 2, ♣ 6
South: ♠ 9, ♥ Q 10 8 5, ♦ K 6 4 3, ♣ Q J 8 2

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
2 NT	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 ♥	Pass	4 ♥	Pass
5 ♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

North-South were not using the artificial convention known as the "Stayman convention", and therefore South's three-club takeout of the two notrump showed a club suit. South's hope, however, was that North would voluntarily show whatever four-card suit he held, and then, if the hands fitted, South would support that suit. After raising North's three-heart bid to four hearts, however, South felt that he had "nothing left", and so he accepted the contract of five clubs.

West's opening lead was the ten of diamonds. Declarer ducked in dummy—he could finesse later, if necessary—and won with his own king; then he cashed dummy's top trumps. When East showed out, South was merely annoyed — he didn't yet know that he was going to lose the contract. He found out soon, however Entering his own hand with a trump, he led to the diamond ace (because, as he said later, he "just knew East had the diamond queen!") Next, he threw East in with a diamond. Unfortunately, however, this did not get South out of trouble—East led his fourth diamond, and West was sure to make a trump trick, then or later. The ace of spades set the contract.

There were several different methods of making 11tricks in this hand, but perhaps the easiest was to lead a spade toward the king before touching trumps. Even if the spade ace had been wrong, South then could have ruffed dummy's low spade with a low trump, drawn trumps by means of his own queen-jack and dummy's ace-king, and trick. In fact, South had to go out eventually surrendered a diamond of his way to lose more than one spade and one diamond!
