PERSONALS
—Mr. Mackenzie King revealed tonight that the Finance Minister today offered his resignation because he believed it was better to do in view of his enforced absence from Ottawa.

The Prime Minister said he had told Mr. Dunning he would not accept his resignation. It was his wish, and he was confident it would be the wish of the people of Canada, that Mr. Dunning take as long as he needed to recover his health, without any worries or sense of responsibility.

Acting Finance Minister
Revenue Minister Hiesley, who has acted as Finance Minister on several occasions during Mr. Dunning's illness, will continue in that capacity.

Mr. Dunning was very much concerned about the necessity of his being away from his duties for such a long period, the Prime Minister said. "I pointed out to him that ministers on different fronts in the past had been forced to take long vacations because of ill health, and that people had been glad to approve because of the valuable services such ministers had rendered."

Mr. Dunning would not accept his resignation but he should take as long as necessary to restore his health and send him back to his duties with the old zest.

There were several matters I would like to have had him take up abroad, but he felt he must be completely removed from all sense of responsibility and I agreed with him. His physicians have said he must be relieved of all duties direct or indirect in order that his recovery may be complete."

Indefinite Absence
The Prime Minister said he had no idea how long Mr. Dunning would be away. That would depend entirely upon the progress of his recovery.

Mr. Dunning will go first to England and visit the sections of Levestershire where he was born July 31, 1885.

The Prime Minister said he had suggested that Mr. Dunning go to South America where there were "one or two things" he wanted the Finance Minister to look into.

But that would have been against the wish of the government for complete severance from official responsibilities.

Mr. Dunning's recovery from the effect of his strenuous work of the last session, particularly during the last week of the session, has been slower than his recovery from the original attack which occurred just before prorogation of the 1938 session.

Since prorogation, Mr. Dunning has been under closer observation by specialists, and it was his final judgment that his complete recovery was possible, but only after a long period of rest completely removed from the worries of office.

It has been generally predicted that Mr. Dunning would not contest the next election, and he has been reported as likely to resign for several of the government appointments now pending, also for the principality of McGill University.

Today's announcement made it obvious that Mr. Dunning would not personally enter the campaign if a general election comes in October or November this year. He represents Queen's, Prince Edward Island.

Mr. Mackenzie King had nothing to add to his statement last week on the prospects of a general election this year. He said that it would depend largely on the international picture in Europe. So long as there was an apparent possibility that parliament might be called upon to make some decision on the question of peace or war, he would not consider it wise to dissolve Parliament for the purpose of holding a general election.

ACCIDENTAL

rushed to the scene and found the girl partly under the car and the man, known clear. The radio in the car was still going out the car was a complete wreck. He phoned for the doctor.

James Bevel, engineer of train, in his evidence stated that he had been driving a P.E.I. Railway since 1919. The maximum speed of the train on this trip was 30 miles per hour. As they were approaching the crossing he thought he had seen the car on the track and slowed up, but when he got closer he found the car was stopped on the right hand side of the track. (This was Larkin's car).

When he found the track was clear he picked up speed. He stated that he started to blow at the whistle post and kept blowing until within a hundred yards of the crossing.

The fireman shouted to him just as they hit the car. He stopped the engine in about 300 yards. Hiram Howatt, fireman, testified that he saw the car approaching a quarter of a mile away and thought they were going to stop. There was no indication of their trying to race the train. He thought they were stopping but they didn't. He knew they had struck. He shouted to the engineer, "hold her, we have struck an automobile."

Conductor Michael Mooney also gave evidence of the accident. Corp. Lines took the stand and gave evidence as to his investigation of the accident and also read a telegram from Dr. B. P. Miller, New Waterford, the other occupant of the car was too ill to return home to attend the funeral of Miss Purdy, on the understanding that he would return to Summerside to close the inquest with his evidence.

DELEGATES
Cheatham, N.B., chairman of the Unit who in his opening remarks referred to the pleasure it was in seeing so many present, and presiding over one of the most successful schools in the world.

The speaker referred to the fact that we are most fortunate in having the International President of the F.I.D.A., Mr. Willard Crain of Cincinnati, Ohio, one of the United States, also several prominent artists from American and Upper Canadian cities present. Mr. Snowball then introduced Mr. Ernest Simmons of Toronto as schoolmaster under whose supervision the two-day program will be carried out.

The first session was devoted to spray and bow making. The afternoon session was devoted to the making of pillows, wreaths, gates, all of which are displayed in the lobby of the Hotel. President Crain was then heard in a very inspiring address on advertising, merchandising and salesmanship. The president was followed by Mr. Leo McKenna on flower arrangement, salesmanship, cost of deliveries, etc.

During the day the school master, Mr. Simmons gave short talks from time to time on floriculture in all its branches, and his topics were listened to with keen interest by the school.

At the close of the afternoon session a beautiful basket of Glad-i-ol in many pleasing shades, the handle of the basket wound with harmonizing ribbon terminating in a lovely bow, was sent to the suite of Mrs. Mould, wife of the Manager of the Charlottetown, with the compliments of the Maritime Unit.

Moncton Will Be Terminus For Airways

MONCTON, N. B., Aug. 1.—H. R. Emmerson, M. P. for Westmorland County, said today he had communicated with Transport Minister Howe, who advised him this afternoon there is absolutely no change in plans with regard to Moncton as the eastern terminus of the Trans-Canada Airways.

During the weekend R. E. Finn, M. P. Halifax stated Halifax instead of Moncton would be the eastern terminus.

"Contractors at the new Moncton air base in Lakeburn have informed me they are being pressed to complete the field so that services between the Maritimes and the remainder of Canada, via T. C. A., can be inaugurated as soon as possible," said Mr. Emmerson.

DENIES HALIFAX REPORT
HAMPTON, N. B., Aug. 1.—Allan G. McAvity, M. P. for Saint John Albert, received the following telegram today from Transport Minister Howe denying report Halifax would become the eastern terminus of Trans-Canada Airways instead of Moncton:

"I was advised no change contemplated in Maritime service as announced previously. Moncton will be main distributing centre and first class service will go from there to other Maritime cities. Weather conditions as determined by actual experience will decide what type of service beyond Moncton. This applies to Saint John as well as Halifax."

In an interview at Montreal, Monday Mr. Howe said: "Moncton is the T.C.A. terminus but we have equipped Halifax with all necessary facilities in view of the possible switch. We are studying Halifax situation and if the weather and other matters there prove as favorable as at Moncton we naturally will run our plans right through to Halifax to have a coast-to-coast service."

FIRST AID FOR MENU READERS
Summer is vacation time and if you expect to take a trip, you might like to have a good food vocabulary. Here is an explanation of some of the terms on menu cards:

All just served with the natural meat juices, as "roast beef au jus."

Barbecue—To roast split whole or in pieces, on a gridiron, spit or over coals in a specially prepared trench. Usually the meat is basted with a highly seasoned sauce.

Barbecue Sauce—Sauce with tomato base, highly seasoned with onion, garlic, vinegar and other spicy condiments, used for basting meat.

Beef a la mode—Braised beef with vegetables. The beef is usually larded and the vegetables cut in small pieces.

Filet Mignon—A slice cut from the beef tenderloin, wrapped in a bacon leaf and rolled. Usually served with a sauce. The "mignon" means small.

Minute steak—A small tender steak, cut about 3-4 inch thick and pan-broiled in a highly greased frying pan, just long enough to brown attractively on both sides.

Planked steak—Steak broiled on a plank especially made for the purpose. The broiler is hand-cranked. The steak is broiled partially transferred to the plank, garnished with vegetables and then returned to the broiler to finish cooking.

Meat en brochette—Meat threaded on a skewer, either alone or alternating with pieces of onion or tomato or other vegetables, broiled as a rule, but may be cooked otherwise.

Pate—a delicate meat paste.

Roastie—a small piece of lean meat, generally a boned lamb chop. May be any similar piece of meat, however.

Do you know the official difference between bouillon and consommé? It is little difficult. Both are clear soups, which may or may not be garnished.

Bouillon usually is said to be made of beef alone, and consommé is made of beef and other meats, one of which should be chicken. Beef can be included.

Color is a distinction for bouillon is dark and consommé light.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

BETTER CHILD PICTURES

Your child pictures will be more interesting if they "tell a story." Show the child busy at something—such as this repair job. And don't stand too far back.

VIRTUALLY every parent takes snapshots of the children—and would like to take better ones. It's not difficult to take a good child picture, and there's no subject more appealing. But most of these pictures can be made still better, if attention is paid to a few common, easily-corrected faults.

The commonest faults are: lack of "story" interest, wrong choice of background or setting, subject too far from camera, and movement which blurs the picture.

Almost any child snapshot will be better if it "tells a story." Simply give the child something to do—dress a doll, draw a picture, fix a toy wagon wheel, blow soap bubbles. Such activity adds interest to the picture—and also makes picture taking more interesting for the child.

Give a small baby a rattle or brightly colored object to play with—it will arouse his interest, and you will get livelier, more expressive pictures.

Be careful in choosing background. Look beyond the subject—your camera lens will. Avoid a background that has a definite, obstructive pattern, such as the side of a clapboarded house. And try for good contrast with the subject. For example, if the child is wearing light-colored clothes, a dark hedge may make a good background. A blitop with the child against a sky background is also good.

Examine the child snapshots you have taken. If the subject appears too small in most of them, you're taking pictures at too great a distance. See if you can't get closer. It's easy with a focusing camera, or an inexpensive box or folding type that has a "two-point" focus setting. A portrait attachment is also useful for "close-ups" at three and one-half feet or even a bit nearer. You need not fear cutting off part of your subject, provided you locate the subject accurately in the view finder and then do not move the camera when making the exposure.

Movement—either of camera or subject—blurs the picture. Take care to hold the camera still at the moment you snap the shutter. And, with a box camera, pick a time when the subject is not moving rapidly.

If you have a finer camera, use a shutter speed of 1/100 second or faster, with a correspondingly larger lens opening.

Watch these points in taking child snapshots. They're all simple, no trouble—and they'll insure you better pictures.
