Pithy Paragraphs Culled From Some Recent Speeches

By FORBES RHUDE
 Canadian Press Business Teletype
 Of the making of speeches there is no end. Some of them make news and get published, but many a pithy paragraph perishes on the after-dinner air. Here are some quotations from recent speeches:
 Dr. David W. Slater, professor of economics, Queen's University:
 "The rate of growth of expenditures on alcoholic beverages is partly a statistical illusion in that home brew and the illicit manufacture of alcohol was much more important 30 years ago than it now is."
 Sir Edward Herbert, member of the British trade mission to Canada:
 "If the right people do the right thing in the right way you can sell anywhere."
 J. R. White, president, Imperial Oil Ltd., commenting on the increased investment needed to keep business going:
 "In so short a time as five years, our company's investment for employee has moved up from just under $35,000 to more than $50,000. It can be questioned how widely the general public realizes that the job of the average employee in industry is made possible by the investment of a small fortune in plant and equipment."
 Virgil Reed, vice-president, J. Walter Thompson Company, New York:
 "Motivation research is 50 per cent polysyllabic semantics, 25 per cent improved theory and 25 per cent useful method if honestly applied."
 "The motivation research" to which Mr. Reed refers is one of the current "rages" in advertising circles.
 It doesn't ask you directly whether you would buy a certain product. It asks you something else to see whether you're the sort of person who would buy it—even if you don't consciously know it. At least, that's one explanation of it.
 The Chemical Institute of Canada will hold its annual conference and exhibition in Toronto May 26-28. About 1,500 delegates from Canada and the United States will attend and will hear some 160 papers on science and engineering. About 55 companies will exhibit equipment.

Sentenced For Selling Drugs

HALIFAX (CP)—An unemployed Dartmouth, N. S., man who sold three capsules of drugs to a plainclothes RCMP officer was sentenced Wednesday to six months in county jail for selling drugs illegally.
 Sgt. J. G. Skinner testified in county court he bought the drugs March 8 and 9 from George Henry Taylor of Dartmouth. They were paid for in marked bills totalling $30.
 Some meetings of the RCMP sergeant and Taylor in a car, on a street corner and in a restaurant, where the arrest was made March 9, were witnessed by other members of the RCMP.
 A police statement admitted as evidence quoted Taylor as saying he stole a quantity of drugs from a hospital where he once worked as a male nurse. He destroyed all but the three capsules which he sold to buy liquor.
 The drug was not identified. Police said only that it was habit-forming.

Russia Joins Northwest Atlantic Fisheries Body

HALIFAX (CP)—Russia has joined the International Commission for Northwest Atlantic Fisheries, Dr. Erik M. Poulson, the commission's executive secretary, announced Thursday.
 Soviet delegate will attend ICNAF's annual meeting at its headquarters here next month. The Soviet Union becomes the 12th nation to sign the international convention setting up the commission, whose aim is protection and conservation of fisheries in the northwestern part of the Atlantic Ocean.
 Russian representatives attended an earlier commission meeting here as observers. This year's meeting will be held at Dalhousie University June 9-14. Last year's was in Lisbon, Portugal.
 Russia's signing did not come as a surprise, Dr. Poulson said. Last year she indicated she would abide by commission regulations if she decided to fish in ICNAF waters. Soviet trawlers have been fishing in the Northwest Atlantic this year and their ships had been reported on the Grand Banks previously.
 In 1954 RCAF planes were sent to the Banks to investigate radio messages in Russian picked up by ships and shore stations. They found two Soviet trawlers of about 1,600 tons, five times the size of Canadian trawlers.
FIRST SIGHTING HERE
 Russian ships have fished off Iceland for years but this was the first time they were seen off Newfoundland.
 Commission chairman is Klaus Sunnana, Norway fisheries director. Canadian members are Deputy Fisheries Minister Clark and J. H. MacKichan, general manager of United Maritime Fishermen Limited, Halifax.
 Other member countries are Denmark, France, West Ger-
