And don't forget, be sure
To take a look at the famous "Bike"
In PROWSE'S well-known Store.

The handsome Brantford Bicycle
That in their window's shown
Is as good as any in Charlottetown,
And it may be your own.

A jar in which are cents galore
Is placed where all can see;
Guess how many cents the jar contains
And the "Bike" your own will be.

Be wise, make all your purchases
At PROWSE'S Clothing Store;
Each purchase, on that Bicycle,
Will give you one chance more.

Their Carpets, Hats and Furnishings,
And all, in fact, they keep,
Compared with others in the town
Are more than quite as cheap.

SPRAYING FRUIT TREES.

Valuable Information Given by Mr. Craig, of the Experimental Farm.

By instruction of the Minister of Agriculture, the Hon. A. R. Angers, important experiments for the control of fungous disease of fruits were inaugurated last week at various points in the fruit growing districts of Grimsby and St. Catharines, Ont., by Mr. John Craig, Horticulturist of the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. The practice for spraying fruit trees for the prevention of insect and fungous pests has, for some time, been strongly urged by the entomologist and the horticulturist of the Central Farm, and the subject has received much attention at all agricultural conventions for the last two or three years. Experiments were inaugurated at seven different centres in the Grimsby and St. Catharines districts, the unusual forwardness of the season preventing operating on a large scale. Peaches, cherries and plums were treated with the two-fold object of preventing loss from a fungous disease, causing the fruit to rot on the tree, and insect attacks. Apples and pears have also for some years past being seriously injured by "spotting" and "cracking," due to the presence of fungous disease, and by the attacks of codling moths and curculio. These were sprayed with the hope that the injuries caused by the pests mentioned might be greatly lessened. For early spraying, before the buds open, copper sulphate, 1 lb., dissolved in 25 gallons of water, is used. The next application is made just before the blossoms open, with dilute Bordeaux mixture. This is prepared by dissolving 4 pounds of copper sulphate in as many gallons of water. The lime is then added to the copper sulphate solution, and the whole diluted with water to 45 gallons, or the capacity of an ordinary coal-oil barrel.

The third spraying should take place immediately after the blossoms have fallen and the fruit has set. Bordeaux mixture is used as before, with the addition of 4 ounces of Paris green to prevent the attacks of leaf-eating insects; another application of the same mixture should be made three weeks later.

Copper carbonate is recommended for the last spraying, which is made two or three weeks later. This is prepared by dissolving 5 ounces or copper carbonate in two quarts of ammonia, and diluting with 45 gallons of water. The treatment just outlined is recommended for pears, apples and grapes. In spraying the stone fruits the quantity of Paris green is reduced to 3 ounces per barrel of water, as the foliage is more susceptible to injury. Explicit instructions for the use and preparation of these mixtures have been forwarded to each fruit grower, as well as information regarding the best kinds of spraying apparatus. It has already been demonstrated that the quality of the Fameuse apple, so largely grown in Quebec, can be profitably improved, and its value much enhanced by the judicious use of the mixtures mentioned above, and it is to be regretted that the recommendations regarding spraying, so freely disseminated from the Experimental Farm, have not been more generally apopted.

"THE SCENE WAS CHANGED."

The Tone of Conversation Among the Grits.

The following dialogue between two Grits took place a few days ago in the vicinity of Cavendish, in the presence of a Conservative :

First Grit—"There will not be many self-binders sold this year."

Second Grit—"Why ?"

First Grit—"The farmers will be afraid to spend any money this summer on account of the Tax Acts of Peters & Peters. I was going to buy a binder myself, but I will put it off for fear."

Second Grit—"I think Peters has about fixed himself already. He has certainly deceived us. I had no idea that there was so much boodling going on, especially in the Fort Augustus district. We thought our member, Farquharson, was bad enough, but he has been outdone by Fred. Peters. We were going to buy a seeder this spring, but we will have to put it off too."

At all of which the Conservative laughed heartily, and remarked that it would be interesting to note the long faces of the faithful as they wend their sad way to the tax collectors next fall and compare them with the smiles that adorned the visages of the dupes of Peters & Peters on the night of the 13th Dec., 1893.

A MAN OF MEMORY.

A Maine gentleman says that a remarkable instance of acuteness of observation and retentiveness of memory may be found in Chief Justice Peters. "His mind," he says "is a vast storehouse not only of the legal knowledge; but of general information, and especially of anecdotes illustrating life and character. But his memory is seen at its best in the progress of cases tried before him, where the exact words used by a witness become a subject of controversy.

Then it will be found that he has followed the case so closely that he can repeat correctly the testimony given at any point, a feat, usually, that none of the lawyers can perform. If a question arises as to just what was said by counsel in some argument made perhaps weeks before, he will call up all the circumstances undimmed by the thousand and one other things that have in the meantime been heard by him. When he was at the bar he was a terror to opponents in this respect.—St. John Gazette.

USE SKODA'S DISCOVERY the great Blood and Nerve Remedy.

"SNAP THE WHIP" IN AFRICA.

Tests of Nerve Before Which the Bravest Might Quail.

Among the Hadendowas, a Sudanese tribe whose name was painfully familiar to us a few years ago, young men who aspire to renown challenge one another to a dreadful contest. After ceremonious carte-l—which may be declined without infamy, however, unless the youth refusing have fought once already and triumphed—public notice is given and at the time appointed all the population of the village assemble. The champions are stripped to the waist, and they carry a whip of hippopotamus hide four feet long, one inch square at the base, with edges newly trimmed, as sharp almost as a knife. At a signal they exchange blows methodically and keep it up until one owns defeat, or, very much more frequently, stumbles and falls exhausted, but still defiant. Blood streams at the first cut, as though the whip had been a sword almost, but they often hold out for half an hour. Dr. Gunther says he has seen scars reaching to the very bone. The prize of these contests is a title, "Akhu-el Benat"—Protector of the Maiden—which the victor bears until defeated or married. We can believe that the young men think it worth fighting for, and it would be interesting to know what advantages the title gives exactly, how the maidens regard their protector, whether he has any official position toward them, and so forth.

A custom like this has spread, of course, among neighboring towns under various forms. That of the Abyssinian braves is described by Mansfield Parkyns in the London Standard. The girls themselves play an active part there. When young people are gathered for amusement—one of them will begin peeling a straw of green millet, which is full of pith. Her lover's blood runs cold probably, but he must smile or own himself a craven. When she has cut the dith into bits an inch long he stretches out his bare arm. The example set, every girl who respects herself and has a lover follows it. The young men form a circle, with their arms extended. Blithely then, with many a jest, doubtless, the maidens arrange their bits of pith upright in some fanciful design on the bare flesh, and set them alight. They are nearly an inch thick, and they burn very slowly, but the hapless youth must stand and smile as well as he can till the blood and juices of the seared flesh extinguish them. It is, in fact, a peculiarly horrible form of tattooing.

NOT A MONOSYLLABIC LANGUAGE.

Chinese Made Up of 60,000 Characters Not Difficult to Learn.

There are about 60,000 characters in the Chinese language proper, but the average Chinaman no more learns all of those characters than the every-day person in this country learns the 100,000 words in the English language. The Chinaman, however, learns on the average more than we in a similar position in life. A Chinaman who can neither read nor write is a rarity, according to the New York Evening Post. Chinese is not a monosyllabic language, as many suppose, and it is impossible to utter in Chinese any but the short st sentences in monosyllables. In writing, the Chinaman makes one complicated but integral character for each word, but that word may be properly spoken in two, three or four syllables. His syllables are divided by no longer intervals than are his words, and that is what makes the language sound to a foreigner like a singsong jargon. We do not know whether he is telling a story or attempting a song. The Chinese perhaps thinks the same thing of an American, who bites off his words and swallows them, or telescopes one into the other. Business men thrown in contact with Chinese merchants who speak pure Chinese say that it is not difficult to learn. Instead of twenty-six letters, not including the useless &, the Chinese have 500 or 600 syllables, and these are combined into various forms to make you the 60,000 words in their "dictionary." These syllables vary in meaning according to the tone in which they are spoken or the strokes used in writing them.

A Chinaman can unite any two of the 600 syllables and make an intelligent word. This is not the case with the English language. This flexibility is perhaps owing to the shortness of their words (seldom more than three syllables) and the tone or strokes belonging to the syllable when spoken or written. A syllable may mean one of a hundred things, and its particular meaning is limited by placing another syllable of similar significance before or after it, using its particular tone, or stroke when writing. Sometimes the syllables are uttered in such rapid succession that they seemingly form one word, but the trained Chinese ear notes the tones, and he is easily understood—the marvelous subtleties of accent conveying the expression to a nicety. He does not have to state a proposition, and then, in order to make himself clear, restate it by the usual "or, in other words." There are no "other words" with the Chinese. The tone gives the meaning. The Chinese have a system of 214 radicals, having various strokes from one to seventeen, which are combined with the characters. Each radical has a separate meaning, generally denoting the simplest object, as man, sky, earth, water, king. The student first learn these, which answer to the A B C; he next studies the syllables, or combinations, and thus he has learned to read and spell. Grouping the syllables into words depends upon the powers of speech or of composition in writing. What is popularly known as "slang" is not known to the Chinese. Their language is sufficiently copious without resorting to the brutal forms of speech. The most withering contempt or the keenest of satire may be expressed in the politest terms.

Wisdom Tooth of a Mammoth.

A fossil curiosity in the shape of a mammoth's tooth was found a few days ago in West Seattle by Joseph S. Richards. The tooth was found in the foot of the bluff, not far from the beach, and was covered with clay at the time, indicating that it had been unearthed by the breaking away of the hill. The crown of the tooth, which was of an oval shape, measured 7¼ inches in its largest diameter, 3¼ inches in its smallest diameter, and 18 inches in circumference. The posterior edge of the tooth was 4 inches in length, the anterior edge 6 inches, the largest circumference 22 inches, and the weight 9½ pounds. It is supposed to be the lower back tooth from the left side of the jaw. The ridges have turned to chalcedony, and extend entirely through the tooth, while the material between has the appearance of iron.—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.
